Diamond, 2,000 Carats. Germany Does. Why Not We?

Ladies, News for You.

The Hired Killer Kills.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

ADVENTUROUS young gentlemen will read with some excitement:

"In upper waters of the Sabobento River, Brazil, prospectors have found a collection of large diamonds, including one weighing 2,000 carats, next to the biggest ever discovered."

Diamonds are something like human brains. This diamond, if of fine quality, would be worth $10,000,000, whereas of inferior quality, good only to make diamond drills, it might be worth only $1,000.

The brain of Edison, creating work for millions of men, is worth many BILLIONS, while millions of other brains are not worth ten cents the dozen.

ALSO, THIS diamond emphasizes the importance of the right education and training. Left in the rough, the diamond would be only a curiosity. It must be cut and polished, then comes its value.

So with human raw material. It needs the cutting of education, and the polishing of experience.

What applies to diamonds and human beings applies to other substances. A ton of iron in the rough might be worth ten or fifteen dollars. The same ton of iron, scientifically treated and made into a ton of fine watch springs, would be worth several million dollars.

HERR ECKENER, veteran German flier, will take his big Zeppelin from Germany to South America, then from Brazil to the Chicago "Century of Progress" exposition.

This country, which has the money, the engineering skill, and practically everything but the enterprise and the courage, will look on while Germany does what this country has been unable to do.

We are going to tag on to the German achievement, however, by printing postage stamps at fifty cents apiece, to carry Zeppelin mail to the Chicago exposition and give us a little income.

THERE WAS a day when the American nation, if it saw another country flying across the ocean to South America, north to Chicago and back to Germany, would not be content merely to print a fifty-cent stamp in honor of the event.

Perhaps when we get over our little patching of payrolls and hours we shall return to doing real things, indicating power and ambition.

TWO PIECES of news to interest every woman.

Number one: A woman of twenty-five in Chicago, told by friends that she looked young, thought she would find out about it, bought a child's ticket to the exposition and went in unquestioned.

Number two: From Delhi, India, comes a doctor's certificate that a baby, weighing four pounds three ounces, normal, healthy, has been born to a Hindu girl not yet seven years of age. The child's mother suffered from fright for three days.

Those who believe the British should be kicked out of India should remember that if it were not for the British tens of thousands of Hindu girls under ten years of age would be married, often to middle-aged men, every year.

MORE IMPORTANT news for women. Beauty parlor experts, who call themselves "beauticians" while undertakers call themselves "morticians," announce that "beauty patches" are coming back.

With small hat, please wear the patch near your eye. With a big hat, wear it near the mouth. With common sense, don't wear it at all, but beauticians don't tell you that.

Dresses are to be very loose in the back, a semi-nightgown dressing gown effect, and very tight in the front, making every detail of the figure plain. How that can be done, we don't know, but unless you do it you are not fashionable.

THIS, OUGHT to interest young men. Helen Godehart, fine, big, good-looking girl, seventeen years old, won the American farm-girl championship at Pomona, Cal., milking cows, husking corn, churning and raking.

She ought to marry the champion young American THINKER of about thirty, whoever he may be, and then become the champion mother.

Unfortunately, that champion young thinker will probably marry some wisp of a girl that could not milk a guinea pig, much less a big cow, but can paint the human face prettily. And so it goes.

NEW YORK CITY is interested in its recent catch of alleged murderers, kidnapers, including, it believes, the "first real hired killer" captured in a long time.

Murder, in these gangster-racketeer - kidnap - prohibition days, is a real industry, and professionals, who often combine use of cocaine with assassination, are hired in businesslike fashion for each "job."

Somebody puts the victim "on the spot," identifying him in some way for the killer who has never seen him.

YESTERDAY Chicago criminals holding up a Federal Reserve Bank automobile, taking two bags of money, killed a policeman and escaped under a heavy smoke screen, for which they had arranged in advance.

It will take some time to suppress the wave of crime, so

Farley's Expectation Of Repeal Leads To Action

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The administration set out definitely today to sift all prohibition cases in Federal courts to determine whether prosecution should be pursued, in view of what Postmaster General Farley considers the imminent certainty of repeal.

This course came to light with selection of L. J. Bugg, of Monroeville, Ala., attorney, to be senior counsel of the prohibition unit of the justice department.

He will do the work directly under John S. Hurley, assistant director of the bureau of investigation in charge of prohibition.

One of the original Roosevelt pre-convention campaigners, he has been directed to co-operate with district attorneys throughout the country. The work begins officially on October 1.

The disposition of many of the cases appears likely to be determined by Bugg on the basis of whether it is worth while to the government to prosecute, in view of costs.

He has been instructed to save the government the expense of prosecuting minor cases where feasible.

Bugg was one of Farley's pre-convention scouts and is a friend of the President. He was a delegate-at-large from Alabama to the Democratic convention at Chicago.

BOMB WRECKS HOME, STORE

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., Sept. 23.—A dynamite bomb wrecked the home and confectionery of I. Ragona, of 524 Franklin avenue, Aliquippa, early today and damaged a half-dozen nearby buildings.

No one was injured.

Unconfirmed reports attribute the bombing to blackhand activities.

The bomb, apparently tossed from an automobile onto the sidewalk in front of the building, crashed in the store front and shattered windows in the building. Splinters from the wrecked front were driven across the street into the front of homes there. Windows in Isaly's store, the Sloan Hardware Company and the M. Klein jewelry store were broken by the force of the blast.

Bond Plan Reflation Favored

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—President Roosevelt favors a reflationary plan under which the Federal Reserve Board would buy outstanding government bonds and issue new currency against them.

This plan, authorized under emergency acts of Congress, will be discussed fully by the President with his advisers at a White House conference Sunday night, which may result in the revamping of the nation's fiscal policy, Universal Service learns.

Closer advisers of the President say he favors this method of expanding the currency rather than the various inflationary schemes he and the Treasury have had under consideration for several weeks.

Under the bond-backed currency plan, it was estimated the government would issue new currency at a rate of $50,000,000 a week until any shortage in the circulating medium had ended.

PLAN HELD SAFE

The President was said to favor this plan because it provided a safe method of expanding the currency without the danger of overexpansion. Whenever the administration deemed sufficient currency was in circulation to meet the needs of the country, the issuance would be stopped and the dollar stabilized.

At the same time, it was learned the President, Secretary of the Treasury Woodin and other financial advisers will consider plans for refinancing the existing long-term bonds of the government.

The conference also will take up for final approval the proposal to expand the currency $400,000,000 by government loans to cotton growers up to 10 cents a pound on this year's crop, in return for acreage reduction on the 1934 crop.

Another means of loosening up credits that will be considered is the government's deposit insurance system, which starts in operation January 1. This is designed to open all solvent banks and bring them into the system.

SEES DIFFICULTIES

When the bond-backed currency expansion plan was brought to the attention of Senator Lewis, of Illinois, Democratic whip of the Senate, he said:

"I can foresee some difficulties in the plan, but if the President takes that course, of course it will have my approval."

Some of the most strenuous objectors to radical inflationary schemes were also inclined to approve the plan favored by the President.

They fear the increasing demand for inflation in Congress might result in members taking the bit in their teeth when they reassemble in January and enact legislation that would have a disastrous result.

MINERS FACE POLICE AT BORDER

Throngs Mobilize For Invasion Of W. Va.

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 23.—Crowds of miners were concentrating in this district today for the avowed purpose of extending their code "holiday" into the Northern West Virginia field.

They were carrying out their projected campaign in the face of an armed border patrol of West Virginia state police and deputy sheriffs under orders to repel any invasion of Pennsylvania miners "with force if necessary."

A bit of strategy on the part of the miners themselves seemed the only likelihood of avoiding bloodshed. Instead of boldly marching into hostile territory and an open encounter with the West Virginia authorities, hundreds of miners filtered down through the border guard last night and early today by the simple expedient of using trains and busses.

They were on hand this morning to give courage to their West Virginia buddies in a general walkout of about a dozen mines in the field scheduled for today or Monday.

GATHER AT MINES

Reports, which could not be verified, reached the Fayette coal fields today that a "holiday" vote had been taken among the West Virginia miners and they would walk out Monday.

TWO SEIZED, ANOTHER WOUNDED

Motorist Abducted By North Side Gang, Robbed

Half a dozen shots were fired early today by police pursuing four bandit suspects after they had robbed a motorist in Riverview Park.

One of the fugitives was believed to have been wounded and another was captured a short distance from the scene. Later, another suspect was taken into custody.

The victim was B. H. Moore, Jr., of 62 South Harrison avenue, Bellevue, a dairy company employe.

He told police he was accosted by the four as he started to enter his machine, parked in Federal street, near Plush way, North Side.

Crowding around him, Moore told police, the quartet forced him into his machine and instructed him to get under way. In Davis avenue, at the entrance of Riverview Park, the bandits asked Moore to alight.

A radio police car passed as the youthful bandits were going through Moore's pockets and he hailed the machine. In it were Patrolmen William Krause and Bartholomew Flaherty. Flaherty figured in the capture of Theodore Geisler and Eddie Prince, members of the Maug gang, a short time after their escape from Western Penitentiary.

Moore said he was robbed of $10.

The youth captured said he was William Warnick, 17, of 1125 Sawmill way.

Later police arrested Anthony Martinek, 22, of 1016 Spring Garden avenue, who with Warnick, was held for further investigation.

According to police, Warnick confessed the gang had robbed a man in a similar manner earlier in the evening and said $2 found on Warnick was his share of the first robbery. Police had no report of the first robbery.

Huey's Home Periled by 2 Fires

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Two fires threatened the home of Senator Huey P. Long early today while Mrs. Long was at home alone. Each time a policeman called the fire department and the flames were extinguished. Damage was estimated at $1,700.

This was the third fire this year that has threatened the Senator's $40,000 home, and police have been unable to account for their origin.

Several months ago a fire burned the Senator's automobile in the garage.

ROOSEVELT O. K. ON MINE PACT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt has approved the contract between the United Mine Workers of America and the Smokeless-Appalachian and Northern Coal Control groups, representing, 70 per cent of the nation's soft coal tonnage.

In approving the contract late yesterday the President stipulated that miners outside the United Mine Workers were to enjoy the same wages, hours and conditions of employment as union members and that the collective bargaining provision of the Recovery Act was to be complied with in carrying out the contract. The President's order said:

"In approving this agreement it is with the understanding that the hours and wages and conditions of employment recited herein may also be applied to the employes who are not parties hereto; and that the requirement of Section 7A of the National Industrial Recovery Act will be complied with in carrying out this agreement."

IMPORTANT CONTRACT

The contract, characterized by its signers as "the greatest in magnitude that has ever been negotiated in the history of collective bargaining," set tonnage rates in accordance with the basic daily

Buster Keaton Hurt By Fall in Theater

CLEVELAND, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Buster Keaton, the sad-faced comedian of the movies, suffered an attack of nervous indigestion while preparing to appear at a local theater yesterday and fell offstage, bumping his head. Physicians said the injury was inconsequential.

VOTE MACHINE QUIZ MAPPED

A plan of action was to be mapped out today by the County Commissioners' vote machine investigators, who yesterday were appointed to inquire into the breakdown at Tuesday's primaries. The committee, composed of State Senator Frank J. Harris, chairman, and Attorney William B. McFall and Attorney Edward O. Tabor, probably will begin work Monday.

The meeting today was to be private, the committee conferring upon the policy to be followed out in determining whether mechanical defects or a disposition on the port of the election boards to reject the machines caused the confusion at the polls.

Another probing committee also was announced yesterday. This is the committee of Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, who has announced that he intends to re-examine the machines on October 3. The state probers are H. A. Everett, of State College; George Herbert, of Philadelphia, and Alexander W. Luce, of Lehigh University.

Two Escape Death As Train Hits Auto

Two young men narrowly escaped death when they jumped from their stalled automobile seconds before it was struck by a speeding Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train at Haysville early today.

The automobile from which T. B. McMasters and A. M. Jackson, both of Butler, jumped was dragged about a tenth of a mile before the train could be stopped.

Federal Works Board Inspects Projects Here

The State Board of the Federal Emergency Public Works Administration met in Pittsburgh today for a tour of inspection of projects for which city and county hope to be granted, or to borrow, federal money.

Headed by Chairman J. C. Trees, partner of M. L. Benedum, oil operator and Democratic party financier, the group was met at the Duquesne Club by County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, Mayor John S. Herron and several councilmen.

After inspecting the model of the wharf improvement plan in the City-County Building, the group made an auto tour of the county to see sites of the various road, bridge, tunnel and other projects.

Members of the board include Trees and J. Hale Steinman, of Lancaster, and A. T. Malmed, of Philadelphia. Maj. William Gravell is state engineer and E. N. Hunting, of Pittsburgh, is his assistant.

PENSION BOARD FILES SUIT

County Commissioner W. D. Mansfield, as president of the County Retirement Board, today began court proceedings to test the constitutionality of an act of the last Legislature requiring the county to duplicate employes' contribution to the pension fund.

Mansfield instituted mandamus proceedings against his two fellow commissioners, C. C. McGovern and G. M. Barr, who refused to pay $75,000 into the pension fund on the ground that the new act is invalid.

Judge James H. Gray granted a rule on McGovern and Barr to compel them to show cause why the money should not be paid. The rule is returnable within 10 days.

Heretofore the county has been appropriating $75,000 a year toward the pension fund. Employes paid 1 per cent of their salary. Under the recent act employes are to contribute 3 per cent and the county to match the sum thus raised, estimated for 1933 at around $110,000. Pensions to several hundred former county employes are being held up pending settlement of the suit.

Nurse, Man Held in Plot Against Banker's Niece

YONKERS, N. Y., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—A registered nurse and a former gasoline station attendant were under arrest here today on charges of plotting to kidnap the niece of Russell C. Leffingwell, an assistant secretary of the Treasury in the Wilson administration and now a partner in the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Thomas C. Cullen, agent in charge of the Department of Justice in New York, and Chief of Police Edward Quirk, of Yonkers, announced the arrests simultaneously here and in New York. Both officials said the prisoners had confessed.

The intended victim of the plot was Helen Batcheller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin A. Batcheller, of Yonkers, and now the wife of John K. Dougherty. The girl's mother is a sister of Leffingwell.

Cullen and Quirk said that Batcheller received letters demanding $10,000 under threat of kidnaping his daughter shortly after August 14. Several letters were received, both officials said, and they attributed the capture of the nurse and the man to the promptitude with which Batcheller notified authorities of the threats.

U. S. RELIEF FOR NEEDY MAY INCLUDE COAL DISTRIBUTION

NEW PROPOSAL STUDIED BY PRESIDENT

Agriculture Speeding Foodstuffs Into Aid Channels

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt is considering the advisability of adding federal coal distribution to the government's enlarged program for feeding and clothing destitute families.

He studied the possibility of supplying fuel to the needy during the winter months as the Agricultural Adjustment Administration organized for purchasing and distributing through relief agencies portions of the large farm surpluses of beef, dairy and poultry products, cotton and cottonseed.

The President has reached no decision regarding coal purchases. Like agriculture, which the new relief program is designed to help, coal is an industry which has suffered from reduced consumption.

Federal officials, who were given 30 days by the President to start delivering additional food and clothing to the unemployed, today were perfecting the necessary organization details and were planning their work on a long-term rather than a temporary basis.

It was the agricultural administration's goal to get the first of their foodstuffs in the hands of Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, within the week.

Pork will start the train of foodstuffs toward the lines of destitute now estimated to number 3,500,00 families. Already prepared from hogs purchased by the farm agency in its surplus-reduction program, the first carloads soon will roll into Montana.

Other foodstuffs and clothing made from cotton will follow as fast as Hopkins completes distribution plans. Officials said the federal outlay will greatly exceed the $75,000,000 originally estimated as the cost.

George N. Peek, farm administrator, described the program as "a real attack on the dual problem of people in need of food and oversupplies on the farm."

HAYES SINGS PUPILS' MASS

Several thousand children of parochial schools of the Pittsburgh diocese today heard Bishop Ralph L. Hayes sing his first mass in St. Paul's Cathedral since his elevation to the bishopric of Helena, Mont.

The children overflowed into the sanctuary by permission of the bishop, formerly head of parochial schools of the diocese. There were 20 pupils present from each school of 10 counties. Two of the children presented the bishop with an inscribed sheepskin. Two hundred nuns also attended.

Tomorrow at 11 a. m. Bishop Hayes will celebrate his first pontifical mass in St. Catherine's Church, Beechview.

It will become effective simultaneously with the code on October 2 and will run until April 1, 1934. In January, representatives of the operators and the mine workers will meet with NRA officials to determine whether any changes will be necessary in a new contract, which will go into effect on the expiration of the present one.

District contracts, designed to meet special conditions obtaining in the various districts, will be drawn up under the general contract. District contracts also are expected to be drawn up with groups of operators outside the territory covered by the Smokeless-Appalachian and Northern Coal Control groups.

SOUTHERN OPERATORS

NRA officials continued today to negotiate with Western Kentucky and Alabama operators on the basic rates for those districts, which have not yet been included in the code. It was said the rates would be fixed by next Tuesday at the latest.

Most of the operators in the Smokeless-Appalachian and Northern Coal Control groups today had left for their homes. Operators of the Pocahontas district of West Virginia will meet at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Monday, to discuss operation under the code, and other groups planned similar meetings in their own sections.

NRA officials were still awaiting the filing of a code for the Anthracite industry, but said they had received no definite information as to when it would be filed.

RETAIL CODES SUPPORT ASKED

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—President Lew Hahn, of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, calls on retailers today to support the composite retail and drug codes on its approval by President Roosevelt. He said yesterday:

ENGLAND, France and Italy agree on "disarmament and arms control," but haven't quite decided what "penalties" will be inflicted on disobedient nations.

The Associated Press says Mr. Norman H. Davis, American representative, is expected "to give general support to the plan."

Americans, at home, dealing with problems here, feel that they have enough to do to give support to NRA without supporting anything as distinctly European as persuading Europe's nations not to cut each others throats, for profit or pleasure.

H. G. WELLS, who has mapped out world history for 150 years ahead, doesn't think much of today's history, and calls Hitler's movement "a rebellion of the clumsy lout against civilization, against thought, sanity and books."

Wells doesn't think much of conditions in Italy or Russia either, where dictators hold the stage and power. He even worries a little about England, saying:

"Luncheon parties for literary men may give place to lynching parties before my time is out."

He spoke at a literary luncheon party.

ICKES PROMISES FLOOD HEARING

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Director Harold L. Ickes has promised definitely a hearing for representatives of the Tri-State Authority in the matter of the application for $53,000,000 for the establishment of flood control for the Pittsburgh region, according to an announcement by Joseph F. Guffey before leaving for Pittsburgh yesterday.

Guffey said:

"There is no question about the probability of a hearing on this important subject. It is admitted that there is no project before the emergency administration of public works of greater moment than the question of flood prevention in the Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio valleys. I am advised by Director Ickes that a date soon will be set to suit the convenience of the people of Pittsburgh and the adjoining region. The letter of Mayor Herron asking for a hearing will be given prompt attention."

MINERS MASS ON W. VA. LINE; DARE POLICE

the various mines of this district in a protest demonstration against code conditions and failure of the H. C. Frick Coke Company to sign and grant full recognition to the United Mine Workers of America.

The greatest concentration in the district occurred at the Frick-owned Edenborn mine, scene of minor disorders during the past few days and the place where miners say they believe attempts will be made to resume operations with imported nonunion labor. In the Colonials, where three other Frick mines are located, long picket lines formed as the first streaks of dawn broke over the hills and the chief topic of conversation was today's mass meeting with West Virginia miners.

Another bit of strategy is revealed in the miners' plans for this meeting. Instead of attempting to cross the line in large groups to meet the West Virginia men following today's schedule walkout, the "holiday" leaders have planned a mass meeting in Greene County on the Pennsylvania side, where they are permitted free speech and free assembly.

READY FOR ALL-DAY STAY

The first contingents to the mass meeting began arriving at the Sullivan Bortz farm, between Bobtown and the state line, by 9 o'clock. They came directly from the picket lines and began filtering in groups of one and two machine loads, all of them prepared for an all-day stay.

One machine was loaded with provisions, including a plentiful supply of ice. Another car was loaded with pop and other soft drinks.

One of them said:

"No, we won't picket today because we don't believe it'll be necessary. The West Virginia miners are coming over here to attend our meeting. If they want us to help them next week—well, that's up to the meeting to decide."

W. VA. GOVERNOR SCORED

West Virginia's Governor, H. G. Kump, came in for more than a full share of criticism for his attitude in refusing to act in coal situation. Refusing either to forbid or permit the march across the border, the Governor announced yesterday he had placed the matter entirely in the hands of his state police.

Capt. J. R. Brockus, commander of Troop A, was in active command of the border troops. He said he would stop a march of miners into the state even if he had to "resort to force." He declared:

"These men from Pennsylvania have no business here and we're going to keep 'em out. We have enough trouble in this state of our own without others bothering us."

BOARDS CALLED IN CANVASS OF BALLOTS

Return Group Likely To Inspect Boxes In First Ward

The election board of the Second District, Fifteenth Ward, today was ordered to appear before the returning board on Monday, according to Maj. W. T. Rees, of the Department of Elections. Previously three district boards of the First Ward had been ordered to appear and explain discrepancies in their returns of last Tuesday's primary election. Maj. Rees declined to disclose the nature of the discrepancies in the Fifteenth Ward.

It was also expected the return board might have to look into the ballot boxes of these districts and make a further count of the voting machine results before the work can progress.

Starting its work yesterday, the return board met difficulty in the First District of the First Ward and summoned its election board to appear today. Returns for the Second and Third districts of the same ward were found confused and explanations were demanded.

ERRORS IN CITIES

In scores of districts in the four cities of the county returns have been made erroneously. In some cases only the voting machine results were returned and in others, only the results from paper ballots. In some cases the returns from both were placed on the general return sheet.

Director Rees, in charge of the return board work, said results of each district would be properly tabulated before the next district is taken up.

The County Commissioners yesterday announced political groups would be barred as spectators of the return board work. Temporarily, at least, permission was refused the city Republican organization to put 12 observers in the room.

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern pointed out that Tuesday's voting was not a general election concerning parties, but a primary, in which the interests only of candidates were at stake. He said he had let at least 30 candidates appoint one person each to serve on the board.

PHANTOM VOTES CHARGED

Meanwhile Judge James H. Gray heard testimony that city policemen, a fireman and persons not living in the district voted last Tuesday in the Fourth District of the Ninth Ward.

The testimony was brought out in a complaint of Thomas Johnston, election overseer, of 4724 Hatfield street, against Frank Benetz, judge of election.

Johnston told the court that despite complaints Benetz permitted non-residents of the precinct to vote, including four persons registered from Johnston's home, who did not live there.

Johnston testified a lieutenant of police, two patrolmen and a city fireman were about the polls all day.

Mifflin Township Commissioner Named

Joseph McCaffery was appointed township commissioner for the Fifth Ward of Mifflin Township, after a hearing by Judge Sylvester J. Snee, in Quarter Sessions Court, to succeed the late Charles A. Carrick.

Joseph A. Love was appointed to be deputy constable in West View, on petition of Constable Philip Schladenhaufen.

Church 'In Red'

PRINCESS BARBARA

VOTE ASSESSOR FACES COURT

Mrs. A. May Schwartz, of 147 Margaret street, Mt. Oliver, assessor for the Fourth District, Mt. Oliver, was held for court in $1,000 bond by Justice of the Peace Richard Lowry, of West Homestead, yesterday on a charge of violating the election laws.

She was arrested on complaint of John Hahne, of Mt. Oliver, who charged that he was listed as "no party" on the tax books.

Mrs. Schwartz testified that she visited the Hahne home several times and was unable to find anyone home. She later met Mrs. Hahne on the street, she said, and was told that Hahne had no party affiliations, she testified.

BRIDE SLAYER TO BE HANGED

International News Service.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Sept. 23.—Arrested in Pittsburgh after seven years' search, Leo Dwight Murphy, 43, today was found guilty of the first degree murder of his bride, a Fresno (Cal.) school teacher, here December 10, 1916, while they were on their honeymoon.

As no mercy recommendation accompanied Judge Frank C. Collier's verdict, Murphy will be sentenced to be hanged.

Murphy was arrested here last July under the name of James Callahan, after he had hitchhiked to Pittsburgh from Phoenix, Ariz., with his fourth wife and their 1-year-old baby. The wife, Mrs. Bertha Hindman Callahan, whom he had wed in Rockville, Md., more than two years ago, remained loyal to her spouse and followed him to Long Beach when he was taken back for trial.

LOYALTY PLEA MADE IN 'BUY' CRUSADE

Woman Speaker Urges More Support for NRA Stores

There must be no relaxation of determination to buy and buy now if the NRA program is to be realized, in the opinion of the women in charge of the consumers' pledge campaign which is nearing the finish line in the Pittsburgh area.

Declaring the general public has not yet responded to the necessary extent for backing up the Blue Eagle merchant, Mrs. George G. Bray, chairman of the Women's International League for Peace and a member of the speakers' bureau of the women's auxiliary, NRA, said in a radio address over station WJAS yesterday:

"If you wish to express American loyalty, follow the Blue Eagle as it passes through every town and hamlet in this country carrying its banners 'Buy Now,' or 'Buy ONLY from NRA Members, or 'More Jobs,' or 'Spend Until It Hurts.'"

SELF-PRESERVATION

She said stagnation cannot continue and that individual and group efficiency must be effected under a co-ordinating directing power, adding:

"Therefore it is a matter of self-preservation to join in this movement which already has rescued us from the bottom of the pit and is slowly putting the breath of renewed life into our national body.

PRAISES 'BUY' DRIVE

Miss Helen Grimes, chairman of the women's speakers committee, referred to the Sun-Telegraph's "Spend in September" drive as "sound advice and good business" in an address over station WCAE. She advised:

"Take advantage of the low prices and help the merchant to move his old stock. This will increased his buying power and enable him to place new orders with the manufacturer who in turn increases his business and is able to make new jobs."

Miss Grimes urged women to "cease being a lot of docile dumbells, pouring into the stores and swallowing the price tag, hook, line and sinker," saying:

"If we are 85 per cent of the buying public, let us use this power intelligently and constructively.

"Let us ask intelligent questions. Is the store observing the rule for shorter hours? Are there new employes in this department? Are they being paid the minimum wage? Let us shop intelligently, not in the spirit of criticism but of co-operation."

PROSPERITY PLEA

Speaking over station KDKA last night, Mrs. Ray S. Judd, president of the Women's Club of Pittsburgh, said:

"Inactive and stupid waiting for the return of better times to come with a natural trend of events will never have the desired effect, whereas, confidence, increased purchasing power and sane spending under the Blue Eagle will inevitably bring back normal prosperity to our America."

Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, former president of the Congress of Women's Clubs, will speak on the benefits of increased buying and support of NRA over station WCAE at 6:40 p. m. today.

Holdup of Night Club 'Joke' Until Gun Barks

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Patrons of a night club laughed and jeered at what they thought was just another poor act—until the shooting started.

Seated in the Club Packer in South Philadelphia last night, about 60 men and women were not surprised at the appearance of four men, masked with handkerchiefs and armed with pistols and a shotgun. The management was noted for its "gags."

The leader, waving a gun, ordered:

Another sang:

"Boo! Throw 'em out."

A shotgun roared.

One of the bandits yelled:

"We'll show if we're real or not."

Then one stepped up to the cash register, slugged John Kelser, an employe, with a pistol, scooped up $29, and the four fled to an automobile. Police were told the robbers overlooked a considerably larger sum which had been placed in a small safe a few minutes before the holdup.

Federal Taxes Reflect Upward Buying Surge

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—A strong upward swing in retail trade during July and August, with indications that it will continue this month, was reflected in latest figures made public by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

The bureau reported a gain of $152,646,520 in internal revenue receipts for the first two months of the 1934 fiscal year as compared with the same period last year.

The government reported large amounts of increased revenue from the sales of automobiles, tires, gasoline, cigars and cigarets, beer, liquor, soft drinks, theater admissions, candy, chewing gum and numerous other taxable items.

While the government has no figures to indicate the extent of increased buying for commodities other than those upon which taxes are collected, the heavy increases in this category indicated proportionate increases, it was believed.

While total income taxes showed a loss of $6,465,795, this was more than offset by an increase of $145,279,333 in miscellaneous taxes, which totaled $254,365,929.

In addition, there was a net increase of $29,268,579 on revenues from beer, $15,344,091 of which was collected in August. Taxes on fermented liquors amounted to $3,817,592, a gain of $2,475,881 over the same period for the 1932-33 fiscal year. Taxes on soft drinks were $1,161,822, a gain of $734,791.

Cigars, cigarets and other tobacco brought in $75,575,390 for the two months, a gain of $5,574,793.

HOSPITAL HEADS DRAFT PLANS TO AVERT CLOSING

MONEY PLIGHT ACUTE IN MANY INSTITUTIONS

Quick Relief Needed To Continue Work, Says Yearick

A committee of trustees today was studying means of obtaining financial assistance to enable all of the 36 voluntary hospitals in the Pittsburgh area to remain open.

Henry G. Yearick, superintendent of Homeopathic Hospital, and chairman of the hospital conference of this district, said yesterday that unless immediate relief is forthcoming, many of the institutions will be forced to close. Even passage of the state relief bond issue to be voted on in November will not entirely remedy the seriousness of the situation, he said.

Members of the investigating committee are H. L. Mason, Jr., chairman of the executive committee, Allegheny General Hospital; Judge Robert S. Fraser, member of the board, Magee Hospital; Robert W. Smith, of the Westmoreland Hospital Association; Leo G. Griffith, of the board of St. Francis Hospital; George S. Davison, of the West Penn Hospital, and John E. Roth, of the South Side Hospital.

Yearick revealed that within the last few days the Rochester General Hospital was forced to give a post-dated check for eggs.

TORTURE THUG FOILED BY WOMAN

Apartment Manager Saves $500 Ring From Robber

An armed thug who tortured Mrs. E. E. Barbour, 55, manager of the Hartford Apartments, 430 Atwood street, Oakland, after robbing her of $85 in her first floor apartment last night, was sought by police today.

Mrs. Barbour, a widow, told police the man rang the doorbell and when she answered he thrust a revolver into her face and backed her into a bedroom. As he held her at bay with the weapon, he took the cash from a wardrobe.

ASKS FOR RING

After pocketing the cash, the gunman asked:

"Where's your diamond ring?"

Mrs. Barbour answered that the ring was at a jeweler's for repairs. The thug then seized her and twisted her right arm behind her back, insisting the she surrender the ring. He ceased the torture after telling her to call the jeweler on the telephone. Instead, Mrs. Barbour dialed the telephone number of the Oakland Police Station, saying:

"Send back my ring to 430 Atwood street! Send back my ring to 430 Atwood street!"

ROBBER FLEES

The sergeant, puzzled by the call, asked the caller if she wanted the police and when he received an affirmative reply, ordered a radio car to the place. But before it arrived the gunman, frightened, fled out the back door.

Police were of the opinion that the intruder was familiar with the apartment house. The ring in question, valued at more than $500, was not at the jeweler's, but concealed in the house, Mrs. Barbour told police.

URSCHEL KIDNAP TRIAL SUSPECT EXPECTS 'RAP'

U. S. Finger on Him, Bates Says; Bailey Keeps Silent

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 23.—At least one of the twelve defendants whom the federal government is prosecuting for the $200,000 kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, millionaire oil man, thinks he will be convicted.

He is Albert L. Bates, notorious desperado.

Bates said today, as the defense prepared to make its counter-attack on the government evidence:

"I expect to take the rap."

The government has rested. It is now the defense inning.

Bates, of all the defendants, has had "the finger" put on him by the government. They produced witnesses who testified Bates and the fugitive George ("Machine Gun") Kelly were the pair who, armed with a machine gun and a six-shooter, invaded the Urschel home and "snatched" the millionaire.

The other "super-desperado" on trial, the taciturn Harvey J. Bailey, was non-commital. A somber, aloof man of 49, with a hunted look in his moody eyes, he gives newspaper reporters a wide berth. He "won't talk."

But the government has hooked Bailey into the case—even though not as deeply as Bates.

They have shown that when Bailey was arrested a fortnight after the kidnaping at that mysterious place known as the Shannon rach near Paradise, Tex., which the government contends was a hideout for burglars and bandits, he had $700 of the Urschel ransom money in his trousers.

CRASH INJURES DOCTOR, WIFE

Dr. Richard C. Ritter, of 177 Allegheny avenue, Emsworth; his wife, Mrs. Virginia Ritter, 28, and their 6-month-old daughter, Barbara, were in Suburban General Hospital today with injuries suffered in an automobile collision in the Ohio River boulevard at West Riverview avenue, Bellevue, late yesterday.

The condition of the physician and his wife was pronounced serious, but the infant's was undetermined.

An automobile driven by Jacob Lunsford, 36, of 1940 Sedgwick street, crashed head-on with Dr. Ritter's when, Lunsford told police, he swerved to avoid striking a truck. Lunsford and a passenger in his car, Alexander Sullivan, 35, of 2660 Leland street, North Side, suffered lacerations. Lunsford, arrested on a reckless driving charge, was released on $1,000 bond.

Edward Golombiewski, 8, of 3423 Ridgeway street, was in St. Francis Hospital today with a possible skull fracture suffered when he was struck by an automobile in Bigelow boulevard, near Herron avenue, late yesterday.

FLEEING BANDIT KIDNAPS FAMILY

International News Service.

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 23.—Three persons, a man, a woman and a child, were believed held prisoners today by a fleeing gunman who ran amuck last night in Tazewell County.

The three were kidnaped by the gunman near Kingston Mines after the armed man had halted their automobile and then forced the driver at the point of a pistol to drive away with him as a passenger. Neither the gunman nor his captives could be identified.

The gunman had been arrested earlier yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Henry Donnewald, of Clinton County, who seized him when he saw the man was carrying a revolver.

As the deputy was taking him to the jail at Carlyle, Ill., the prisoner grabbed Donnewald's pistol and shot him in the arm. He then seized the deputy's automobile and escaped.

'LINDY RANSOM' THIEVES JAILED

International News Service.

ANTWERP, Belgium, Sept. 23.—Two men started serving jail sentences today for attempting to convert into Belgian currency a stolen 1,000-pound Bank of England note which they believed was part of a packet of European money exchanged for the ransom paid by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

The men were convicted and sentenced last night under peculiar circumstances. Their attorney announced the prisoners refused to testify in their own behalf, on the grounds the bank note was connected with the Lindbergh ransom and they feared reprisals if they talked.

Police meanwhile continued a searching investigation of circumstances in connection with the case which originally prompted them to announce what appeared to be a definite link between the arrests and the kidnaping of Col. Lindbergh's infant son.

First reports given out by the authorities following the arrest of the men stated that money they attempted to convert at a local bank had been definitely identified as part of the Lindbergh ransom.

Sime Silverman, Oracle Of Show Business, Dies

Variety's Editor Was Foe of Grammar, Pal of Needy

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Sime Silverman, the oracle of show business, the sworn foe of grammar, the man who never let any one pay a check, is dead.

Silverman, founder and owner of the theatrical weekly, Variety, was found dead yesterday in his Los Angeles hotel suite. A lung hemorrage had killed him in his sixty-second year.

Through his paper he talked to showfolk in their own argot and wowed them. When Wall street's world was toppling in the crash of 1929, he chronicled it in this headline:

"Wall Street Lays an Egg."

Should the production "Watch My Dust" roll up a deficit of $1,000, Broadway would know and understand this announcement:

"Joe Umpty-Ump Went for a Grand on Dust."

The big black pencil with which he edited knew not verbs from nouns, and so in the columns of Variety shows were constantly being "authorized" or "readied" and audiences oftentimes were "panicked." Times Square liked it so much that it sometimes called itself Sime's Square.

No first night was complete without him, and he was a fixture at the livelier night clubs—the world's champion check grabber. If anyone tried to pay anything in his presence, he would grow morose. His private pension list of actors who had had their fleeting day and hit the skids was said to be lengthy.

'Ware, Seagulls! Wall Street Is Crossing River

-By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER-

They will move lock, stock and barrel and ticker, tape and margin. And they are right. Why should they pay taxes on other people's money?

There ain't much ado about anything when a broker moves. He just picks up his telephone, puts the goodwill and fixtures in his vest pocket and whistles to his lawyer.

The customers' men are learning how to swim so they can pick prospects out of the river and take fish away from the sea gulls.

The little street that runs from Trinity Graveyard to the East River will soon be as quiet as clover in a cud. But it will always be haunted with memories. It was there our little feet pattered in childish games and it was there our little hands learned to snip out paper dolls.

TRUCE IN CUBA LOOMING

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

HAVANA, Sept. 23—While the government professed no concern over the revolt in rural Matanzas province headed by Isidore Rodriguez Duarte, one of the leaders of the 1931 revolt, administration circles buzzed today with reports of an approaching solution to Cuba's political problems.

President Ramon Grau San Martin conferred secretly with opposition leaders, and there were prospects cabinet changes might bring political peace until after the constitutional convention.

The President promised to reply today to demands of the opposition for a concentration government. There was widespread hope the reply would pave the way to a solution.

This would halt the sporadic uprisings throughout the island, and probably would enable the government to settle strikes paralyzing industry, win recognition by the United States, and obtain American aid for Cuba's financial difficulties.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—Police ordered the arrest today of Gus Winkler, gang leader and public enemy, as an army of federal and city sleuths unearthed fresh clues in the search for five machine gunners who killed a policeman while fleeing with loot seized from four Federal Reserve Bank employes.

"Find Winkler!"

Bergl admited he was a close friend of the North Side gang chieftain and said he had arranged to have one of the automobiles abandoned by the killers completely armored with bullet-proof glass.

Police were firm in their belief that either the gang of "Terrible Touhys" or the Harvey Bailey gang of Southwest desperadoes executed the robbery and killing, possibly with the aid of Winkler.

2 A.M. Wedding Trouble Just a Lot of Fun

It was a lot of trouble for the Berryman Buntons to get married at 2 o'clock this morning, and they had to awaken some people for legal assistance, but today they'd happily tell you that the trouble was a lot of fun.

The bridegroom is Berryman Bunton, 24, of 319 South avenue, Wilkinsburg. And the bride was Miss Louise McGough, 23, of 313 Third street, Aspinwall.

It wasn't an elopement, Bunton will tell you. But whatever it was, the couple telephoned Justice of the Peace George C. Blair, of Wilkinsburg, during the night and asked him to marry them. He mentioned the matter of a license and the couple went in search of a license.

On the North Side they found Chief Clerk Charles A. Hendrickson, of the Marriage License Bureau. He went to the City-County Building with them and issued a license.

Squire Blair then went to his office at 620 Ross avenue, Wilkinsburg, and performed the ceremony. On the way, he picked up Wilkinsburg Police Lieut. D. H. Rankin for a witness.

Robert Seller, of Darlington road, and Walter Reuter, of 204 Virginia avenue, Aspinwall, were the other attendants.

After it was all over, Bridegroom Berryman Bunton said:

"We didn't want a formal wedding and that was our way of going about it. We've been going together for years and there just wasn't any elopement.

Living Burial Charged To O'Connell Suspect

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Awaiting the arrival of warrants from upstate, charging three of the gang with robbery of a Rensselaer, N. Y., bank and the murder of a detective, and Albany bench warrants naming the gang leader and one confederate as the kidnapers of John J. O'Connell, police today were to arraign Leonard Scarnici, 27-year-old gunman, and six companions today for robbery of an uptown New York bank.

And as Scarnici and four men and two women companions faced the specific robbery charge, designed to hold them until the warrants for the more serious crimes are received, authorities worked to complete evidence of the most horrible of the dozen crimes with which Scarnici is charged—living burial of a Springfield, Mass., chauffeur.

Latest accusation against the swarthy admitted killer came from Mrs. Margaret Wilson, of Springfield, who told Capt. Richard Oliver, head of the New York undercover squad, Scarnici had admitted in her presence that he murdered her son in the fantastically cruel fashion at the orders of the "king pin of the Boston underworld."

So impressed was Oliver he immediately got into communication with Massachusetts authorities to obtain full information concerning the case.

Weeping and expressing relief that Scarnici had been apprehended, Mrs. Wilson told local police her son had been acting as chauffeur for a petty Springfield racketeer when he was murdered in April, 1927. Scarnici, she said, made an oral confession in her presence to police of Agawam, a Springfield suburb, but refused to sign it and authorities there dropped the case for lack of corroborative evidence.

PASTOR TO RELATE CONDITIONS HE FOUND IN RUSSIA

WAR ON CHURCH EXPLAINED BY REV. OCKENGA

The Rev. H. J. Ockenga, pastor of the Point Breeze Presbyterian Church, home from a tour of Russia, announced that the church is practically illegal in Russia. Tomorrow he will tell his congregation at two meetings of what he learned of conditions there during his travels.

He said:

"The church is practically illegal, though officially it is tolerated. Nine-tenths of the churches are closed, many of them are now anti-religious museums. When a pastor has any measure of success he is banished to Siberia. Many Christians are accused of counter-revolutions and are shot.

RUSSIA ON FEET

"Russia is on her feet. Heavy industry is working. Stalingrad tractor works produce 50,000 tractors a year. Amo automobile works place 60,000 cars and motor trucks on the Russian market every year. The powers of Russia are turning their attention to light industry such as textiles and shoes. There is work for everybody. Those who work get food and lodging cards. Those who do not, starve.

"One may be married for 50 cents and divorced for the same. Marriages need not be registered. Fifty per cent of marriages end in divorce.

WARS ON ILLITERACY

"Russia is making a great attempt to conquer illiteracy. About 18,000,000 children are in public schools. Classes are connected with factories, prisoners must become literate and every citizen is urged to study.

"Communism is now a world power and must be reckoned with in the next few years. If Russia has five more years of peace she will be the greatest argument for a world revolution in existence."

The Rt. Rev. Alexander Mann, bishop of the Pittsburgh Protestant Episcopal Diocese, tomorrow evening in Trinity Cathedral, will begin a series of sermons, to last a month, discussing the history and growth of the Episcopal church. Special music for each of the services has been arranged by Alfred Hamer, organist and choirmaster.

Tomorrow evening Bishop Mann will tell "How the Church Came to America," and in succession on the four following Sundays he will discuss "Its Organization as a National Communion"; "The Story of the Growth of the Church in the United States," "The Place of the Episcopal Church in the American Christianity" and "The Church's Creed."

Science Lecturer To Speak Tomorrow

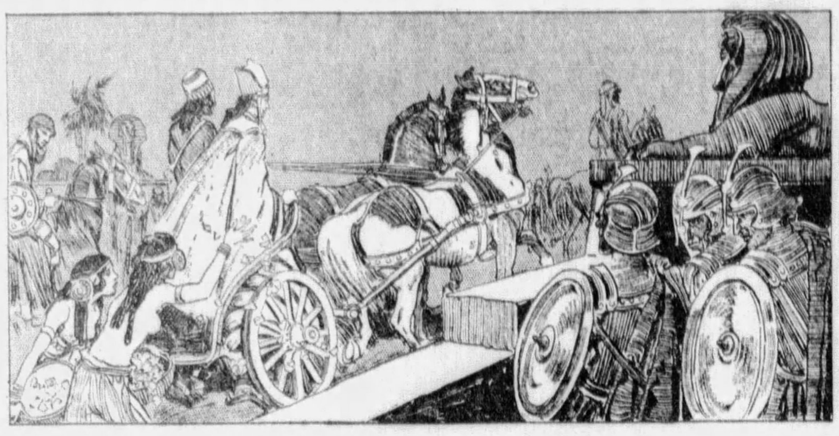
John Randall Dunn, member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, will lecture in Stanley Theater tomorrow afternoon. He speaks under the auspices of the First, Second, and Third Churches of Christ, Scientist, of Pittsburgh. His subject is "Christian Science: the Conquest Over Wrong Thinking."

Genealogical Group To Conduct Service

The Pittsburgh branch of the Genealogical Society of Utah, will have charge of the services at 11:45 a. m. tomorrow, in the Church of Latter Day Saints, Wallingford street. "The Joys of Genealogical Research" and "The Coming of Elijah" will be discussed.

The Story of Joseph -:- CHAPTER XII -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

Told of Pharaoh's offer, Jacob, called Israel, set forth with all his household for Egypt, and when they had come as far as Beersheba, he offered sacrifices there to the God of his father, Isaac.



With them on their journey to Egypt his sons took Jacob and all their wives, their little ones, their cattle and their goods, in the wagons that Pharaoh had sent to carry them. All the grandchildren of Jacob were taken so that none of the seed of Israel remained in the land of Canaan. Joseph went up to Goshen in his chariot to meet them and there presented himself to his father Jacob, and fell upon his neck and wept.

(Next week: The Story of Ruth.)

Then Joseph took five of his brethren before Pharaoh, who said: "The land of Egypt is before thee; in the best of the land make thy father and thy brethren to dwell." And Jacob blessed Pharaoh. (The End.)

SAFETY SUNDAY TO BE MARKED

Sermons, announcements to congregations and religious school lessons on traffic safety subjects in more than half of Pittsburgh's 400 churches and synagogues will mark the observance of Traffic Safety Sunday today and tomorrow as a part of the Better Traffic Commitee's September No-Accident Month program, according to Walter Rosenbaum, chairman of the committee's education section.

Mr. Rosenbaum says:

"Traffic Safety Sunday is particularly important in our September No-Accident Month program for many reasons. Sunday is ordinarily the most hazardous day in the week from a traffic standpoint. Then, too, Traffic Safety Sunday ushers in the last week of the September traffic safety drive, a week which Mayor Herron has set aside as Traffic Courtesy Week. During Traffic Courtesy Week, September 24 to 30, we hope to re-intensify the message which we have been telling the people of Pittsburgh throughout the month. This message is expressed in the slogan, 'Not How Fast but How Safe.'"

ST. BERNADETTE SERVICES HERE

The child Bernadette, whom Roman Catholic Church authorities claim saw the first apparitions of the Holy Virgin at the Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes, France, 75 years ago, will be canonized in Rome, December 8, as Saint Bernadette. As a pre-observance of this rare ceremony, Father Cox tomorrow will begin a nine-Sunday Novena at Old St. Patrick's Church, with the shrine of Our Lady of Lourdes in this edifice as the background. On the final Sunday of the Novena there will be a special canonization service with appropriate music.

The Lourdes' Grotto at Old St. Patrick's is known throughout the United States as one of the most beautiful in this country and communicants come from many far-off points to worship before it.

Incidently the Grotto at Lourdes, in France, is this year observing its diamond jubilee and is the mecca of thousands of pilgrims from all parts of the world. A pilgrimage from Pittsburgh spent three days at Lourdes three months ago with Father Cox.

Father Cox is the American representative of the Lourdes' shrine, with all the rights and privileges for worship in that diocese.

SABBATH SCHOOL CONVENTION TO OPEN

County Sessions to Start Tomorrow Downtown

The Allegheny County Sabbath School Association will open its forty-fourth annual convention tomorrow afternoon in the German Evangelical Protestant Church, Smithfield street. It will last for three days.

The Rev. Dr. Carl August Voss will open the convention at 2:45 p. m., with a worship service. Dr. D. W. Kurtz, former president of McPherson College, and now president of the Chicago Biblical Seminary, will deliver the first of a series of addresses on "Our Needs in Religious Education." The County Christian Endeavor Chorus under Clyde L. Wolford, will sing.

The Rev. Dr. Charles C. Cribbs, president of the Ministerial Union, will preside at the Monday morning exercises at which Dr. Kurtz will speak. In the afternoon Dr. E. P. Westphal, of Philadelphia, will speak on "A Door Opened."

Conferences for the children's, young people's, adult and administrative divisions will be held Monday and Tuesday afternoons and nights in the church.

DR. E. P. WESTPHAL

Leaders in Church To Address 44th Conference

The children's division conferences Monday will be under the direction of Mrs. John M. Bailey, assisted by Miss Ethel L. Smither, of Cincinnati and Miss Ione Sikes, of Philadelphia. Miss Cora B. Dickey, will supervise the young people's conferences, H. C. Critland the adult division and Dr. Francis J. Scott the administrative division.

Dr. Percy R. Hayward, of the International Council of Religious Education, Chicago, will speak at the young people's conference and address the McKeesport session of the convention Monday night in the First Baptist Church, Locust and Olive streets.

Tuesday morning Miss Smither, of the Methodist Episcopal Board, will address the convention on "The Child's Right to an Abundant Life." In the afternoon officers and directors will be elected and the delegates will consider the revision of the constitution and by-laws and the code for Sunday school workers and official bodies of the county churches.

Conferences for the four divisions will be continued Tuesday afternoon and evening. Dr. Hayward will make the closing address of the convention Tuesday night.

Durant Threatened After He Refuses To Accept Bribe

CHAPTER XV.

Crelliman's brown eyes were blank. "Now, why would I expect to find you in Gertie Waxted's apartment?"

"You're not asking me to read your mind, are you?"

Crelliman laughed, and the quality of his mirth would have deceived almost anyone. His eyes took on a sudden slyness, and his smirk made Durant writhe inwardly. With a highly manicured finger, he pointed at the two suitcases on the floor.

"Gertie's getting a break," he said.

"Thanks for the compliment," replied Durant.

Crelliman waved his right hand as though to indicate that nothing could be too complimentary for Durant. He walked a few steps into the room and sat down in an armchair. The way he let his big body down into the chair told of creaking joints, of physical uncertainty that should not come to a man in his early forties.

"Gertie isn't taking a trip, is she—with you?"

Durant leaned against the wall.

"When you were a little boy I suppose the teachers always knew who wrote the dirty word on the blackboard," he said.

Crelliman's brown eyes half closed; the red in his cheeks became a shade more pronounced. "All right. If you do take a trip you'll take nine aunts and four grandmothers as chaperons. Excuse my evil mind," he said in a mock falsetto.

"I'll excuse it," said Durant quietly. "Was there anything you wanted?"

Synopsis

Jackson Durant, young lawyer, has alienated his society friends and lost his fiancee, Sue Leonard, because of his success as the "mouthpiece" who won the acquittal of the notorious Tony Gazotti. Miss Leonard then becomes engaged to Tom Siddall, youthful broker. Shortly afterwards Siddall is arrested, charged with the murder of Mimi Montagne, who was shot dead on the terrace of a penthouse owned by Jim Crelliman. Sue begs Durant to get busy in Siddall's behalf. Durant believes the broker is innocent and secures the aid of Gazotti, who introduces him to Gertie Waxted, closest friend of the murdered entertainer. The lawyer takes Gertie to his apartment for questioning. She agrees to help Siddall's defense. Durant borrows her ring and visits the pawnshop of Levitoff, pawnbroker, who told police he sold a gun to Siddall. Shortly afterwards Levitoff is found shot to death. Durant suspects that Crelliman was behind that murder. He goes to Gertie's apartment to get some clothing for her. Crelliman enters.

Now Go On

Future of Rackets

Crelliman lighted a cigaret. "From you? Why, no. Just dropped in to see Gertie. You see, I thought the little girl would be pretty blue about Mimi and I wanted to cheer her up. But now that I find you here—why, we might have a little talk, Mr. Durant."

"Surprising how these little accidents sometimes unexpectedly lead to something, isn't it?" said Durant.

"It surely is," agreed Crelliman heartily. "Gertie inside?"

He jerked a thumb toward the bedroom door. Durant merely smiled, and Crelliman had the grace to flush a trifle more. He ignored his own question.

"What I just said about a trip put something in my mind, Mr. Durant. Got a little time to spare?"

"Go on," said Durant.

"Michigan's gone wet. Beer is in almost everywhere. What do you think those things spell to a man in my racket, Mr. Durant?"

"You put the letters together," said Durant.

"All right, I will. They spell the end of the rackets. And to a lot of men that have got rich in the last few years, repeal spells ruin. But not to a smart man. Did you know that I'm a very smart man, Mr. Durant?"

"I'll take that for granted," said Durant.

"You're a smart man, too. Too smart to be wasting your time fooling around with small change. I suppose Gazotti gave you twenty-five, maybe fifty grand for saving him. What's fifty grand when you might be getting ten times that?"

"Not much, is it?" admitted Durant.

A Proposition

"Carfare," said Crelliman. "Why a girl like Gertie ought to have fifty grand on her fingers and wrists, and five times that around her neck. She's a swell kid and a smart kid. She rates a protector."

"She has one," said Durant.

"Sure. That's what I was driving at and you got moral about it. I like Gertie and always have liked her. I think you and me could be friends, too. I need a smart man like you. How would you like to spend a year in Europe beginning right away? I'll bet Gertie would like to be turned loose in those Paris shops. With a two-hundred-grand retainer you could buy a lot of pretties for that little girl."

"And who would give me such a retainer to take a pleasure trip?" asked Durant.

"Not pleasure all the time. Plenty business would be involved. And I'm the man that would pay the retainer. What am I going to do, now that prohibition's on the skids? Live on my income? Not Jim Crelliman. Here's what I'm going

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 23.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

The President just created the F. E. R. A. (Federal Emergency Relief Association), and the A. A. A. (Agricultural Adjustment Administration), and the P. W. A. (Public Works Administration), so the F. E. R. A., the A. A. A. and the P. W. A. are to work in conjunction with the NRA with the financial help of the R. F. C., who will pay the C. O. D.'s of the C. C. C. (Citizens' Conservation Camps) and take in return for all money loaned out to all these initials, I. O. U.'s.

Will Rogers

Never was a country in the throes of more capital letters than the old U. S. A. But we still haven't sent out the S. O. S.

Yours, WILL.

INLAND WATER ROUTES URGED

Operation of common carriers on the inland waterways with the regularity of railroad systems is advocated as a definite step toward cheaper transportation, by Maj. Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, president of the Inland Waterways Corporation.

Gen. Ashburn

Ashburn urged that the same governmental support for inland arteries as is accorded sea, lake and gulf ports, to encourage development of natural resources and industry in inland communities. He spoke last night before the Traffic and Transportation Association of Pittsburgh in the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium.

Denying that freight carrying by his corporation, the Federal Barge Lines, first developed by the government, was responsible for the plight of railroads, he said:

"The main point at issue is: Shall water carriers be allowed to utilize the water arteries already created, free of charge for such water rights-of-way, or shall such costs be imposed for their utilization as to destroy the very purpose for which water rights-of-way were created; i. e., to furnish cheaper transportation?"

Mark Shields Will Review Primaries

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Some young lady who asks what color Judge Musmanno's hair is has never seen the Judge, because that is the first thing you notice about him.

Furiously waving chestnut locks that would appear somewhat ridiculous on 99 people out of 100, but framing his sometimes young and gay, sometimes old and serious, and all the time poetic countenance, properly indicate the fiery righteousness of his devotion to justice.

Is the Judge married? He's a living example of what the ancient jurists said: "The law, itself, is a jealous wife."

With a great display of serious attention she listened to the introductory remarks of the auctioneer as he convincingly pointed out the merits and superior value of a Chinese vase. When he called for the bidding she was first to pipe up with, "Ten cents."

Mrs. Desmond—Fred Allen was christened John F. Sullivan. His first stage name was Paul Huckle. Once he was a juggler.

Honus Wagner, still as enthusiastic today about the Pirates as he was at the beginning of the season, dropped in this afternoon. He's getting all set for the World Series. He's saving his predictions for his own stories of the World Series that he expects to write for a national syndicate.

Will Repeal Affect Our Music?

By AIRCASTER

I asked Paul Whiteman:

"What will repeal do to dance music?"

Whiteman replied:

"Plenty."

Rudy Vallee thinks so, too. So does Don Bestor. So does Phil Spitalny, and Frank Black, and Johnny Green, all alert lads who keep up with modern trends.

So when I said last week that no matter what happened we'd always have jazz with us, in the sense of typically American rhythms, maybe I was wrong. But I think not. But if Whiteman and Vallee, and Bestor and Black and Green and Spitalny are all going to strive to write or interpret a new musical history, it's a happy portent.

"But what's repeal got to do with it?" somebody might ask.

So Paul Whiteman, who deserves to be the spokesman of the persistent pioneers, says this:

* * *

Sees Things

"It's like I was looking into one of those crystals. I can see a decided change in the immediate offing, affecting not only dance bands, but popular music in general.

"With the return of liquor, there will be a musical return to rich orchestrations, interestingly beautiful renditions and a gradual but certain fading of low-down rhythm tunes. Of paramount importance will be the introduction of a new type of popular song."

* * *

Ginger Ale?

If the dean is right, then history will be repeating itself. I have childhood recollections of "Bird in a Gilded Cage," "After the Ball," the "Strolling Policeman." But if the dean and all his pals are just having a little dream, then the old hey-nonny-nonny will linger on. And what makes me believe that it will is the fact that Paul and his confreres are assuming that prohibition actually prohibited.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

My debutante list for 1933 jumps to 42 today! This is surely going to be the biggest bud season since our heydays in the glamorous pre-depression era.

The new addition to the list is charming young Frances De Lora Frampton, the Duward Belmont Framptons' daughter.

Since no less than 15 of Frances' closest friends are on the debutante list, her parents have decided to present their daughter the same season.

Frances' mother is one of the youngest and prettiest presidents the Southern Club has ever had. The young debutante, pretty like her mother, studied at both Winchester and Thurston, and attended Pennsylvania College for Women. She has decided to quit college and devote her time to music.

Dance For Buds

An important date in the deb's holiday calendar will be December 27, when Mrs. F. A. Demms will entertain the debutante set and boys home from college and schools at a breakfast-dance in the Twentieth Century Club.

Josephine Bygate, her debutante-age daughter, who'll not be presented to society, however, will be the honor guest. Josephine goes to Connecticut College.

* * *

Debutantes of the season—and their escorts—will be entertained at the opening supper-dance of the Chatterbox, William Penn Hotel, September 29.

* * *

Two of the debs, Maltilda Reed and Gwendolen Holmes, have been in New York, stopping at the Blackstone Hotel. They drove Tillie Reed's sister, Mary, back to school—she goes to Dobbs Ferry.

* * *

Miss Romaine P. Clark, of Noble avenue, Crafton, has as her house guests Mrs. Oliver C. Perden and Mrs. H. M. Armitage, of Chester, Pa., and Mrs. E. I. Scott, of Philadelphia.

Presidents of other clubs in the vicinity will be entertained by the Dormont College Club when it has its guest night Wednesday in Dormont New Century Club. Dr. Harry C. McKown, formerly of the University of Pittsburgh, will be guest speaker, talking on "The World Do Move." Mrs. Esther Blue Loeffler will provide the music.

Non-Members Invited to Attend Hunts Race

For the first time in its history, the committee for the Columbus Day races has sent out invitations to non-members of the Western Pennsylvania Hunts Race Association, asking them to attend the races and to become members.

The committee wants everyone interested in steeplechases to attend the Columbus Day event, always a thrilling day for lovers of the sport.

Races are run each year over the George R. McNary farm, Greensburg, with members of the Rolling Rock, Greensburg, Sewickley, Fox Chapel and Indiana hunts attending.

A distinction of the Columbus Day event is that it is the only steeplechase here sanctioned by the Hunts Committee of the National Steeple Chase and Hunts Association.

Bertha E. Jewell Married to A. A. Fedor

Miss Bertha E. Jewell, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. James S. Jewell, of Grandin avenue, Dormont, and Adrian A. Fedor, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Fedor, of Cedar boulevard, Mt. Lebanon, were married September 13 by the Rev. R. O. Hudson, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Uniontown, Pa., in his manse.

After a western motor trip, including a visit to the World's Fair, Mr. and Mrs. Fedor will be at home in Potomac avenue, Dormont, October 1.

Braddock Woman's Club to Hear President

Judge Sara Soffel will address the Braddock Woman's Club at its president's day, Wednesday, at the home of Mrs. W. J. Aiken, Gordon street, Edgewood.

Mrs. R. E. Thompson will make her inaugural address and the program will also include music by Miss Doris Peoples.

The club will have its fortieth anniversary in February.

Mrs. J. C. Downs, of Wainbell avenue, will be hostess for this meeting, but subsequent ones are to be in the Mt. Lebanon United Presbyterian Church.

New Century Club Drama Unit to Give Card Party

The department of drama, Dormont New Century Club, will have another of its semi-monthly card parties at the home of Mrs. C. G. Moore, Voelkel avenue, on Tuesday at 1 o'clock.

THE POPULAR FELT HAT ENDURES AS CLASSIC FOR SPORTSWEAR

THE LAST years of ever-changing fashion vagaries have, if nothing else, proven the permanence of several fashion classics. One of the most enduring of all is the felt hat for sports.

* * *

THIS YEAR you need to know that their first great commandment is simplicity. There is no definite ruling about size or shape—almost everything counts. Brims—large or not, as you please. The wider the brim, the more formal—for town. Most brims follow the up-in-back, down-in-front movement, although the most dashing of all hats has a brim that snaps sharply down wherever it looks best on the individual. Robin Hood style—down on one side, up on the other—is a darling effect for young faces.

* * *

FOR TOWN tailleurs, pick, by all means, a Spanish sailor, stiff and trim, in felt. One glance at the head at the top of the illustration tells the story. Let the felt be bright, with a slim little contrasting band around it to match the ensemble. To alternate, try a bright little leather band—one of the new leather hat belts—or a braided rope of yarn.

* * *

IF YOU are headed for college, both hats in the center of the drawing should interest you. The one on the left, made, as all of these are, by one of America's finest hat makers, is a perfect expression of the simplicity that fine felts are best developed in. A casual little brim, turned up at will, and a bright feather tucked in front at a vital spot, make this a good campus hat. Girls will wear it with big brown fur coats, starting off on a weekend, on the campus, coming to and from classes, and with their riding habits for a canter early in the morning. The hat in the center left promises to be a felt hat leader this fall. It has the modified peak outline, a turned up brim in back to accommodate fur collars, and smart little feather trim, a nodding acceptance of a fad for plumage of some sort on hats.

* * *

THE YOUNGSTER, lower left, wears the regulation felt hat, utterly simple, childish yet mature (since even her own mother could wear the hat set on a different angle) and distinguished because of its plainness. This is the sort of hat you'll see on coming society debutantes playing in Central Park, their nurses close at hand.

* * *

THESE HATS will be in the shops by the time this appears. Examine them for their new surfaces. You'll see them blend peculiar to masculine felts. It has a pleasant "scratch finish"—very smart and entirely in keeping with hough new tweeds they'll be worn with this year.

Lines to a Rich Man

So you outbid me, sir, with this fine stuff
That is not you, but yours; you have weighed
Your silver out, triumphant; you have paid
With wine and belch and diamonds long enough,
And all you stubby-fingered chariness.
Go, claim her, then; go lead her to your bed
In that great house, that house untenanted,
And there appraise with equal wariness:

For I have read how one amazing queen
Came gravely in her golden bridal beauty
To kiss the jeweled brow, as was her duty;
And how a shabby poet, pressed unseen
Against a wall, smiled once; and how the king

Smellebrity

At Dave's the other night, a tall lad in evening dress came in with a girl. He was new to the habitues. The buzz made the rounds that he was one of President Roosevelt's sons. Nobody was certain, though. His presence, however, sent a hush over the restaurant, and the diners put on their best manners.

"Let's make sure that he is one of the Roosevelts," suggested somebody, "send a waiter over for his autograph."

Another few moments of quiet prevailed while the waiter carried out his instructions. Then he raced back with the rare autograph.

It read:

"Good wishes—Gus Flampf."

Quiteso, Quiteso

The newspapers recently ran a one column photograph of what a headache looks like, and J. M. Josefsberg can't understand why a lot of time was wasted—when they could have a picture of Bernie.

Capsule Criticism

Added to our crisp cracks from caustic critics is this one, which ruptured a long friendship between Edna Leedom and a local reviewer.

When she opened in a new show as the star, he said of her:

"Leedom and Weep."

'We Want Beer'

Judge Anthony Burke, presiding in Night Court this week, suspended sentence on James Heyward, the victim of "Good Times." Heyward was arrested for panhandling. He didn't like to beg, he said, he had to—he was so hungry. He told His Honor that until beer became legal—he had a good job—washing dishes in a Bowery beanery.

He was let out with other men sometime after April 7th—when the restaurant was turned into a beer garden!

Form of Criticism

They were gabbing about a conceited actor who is reported on the verge of marrying, again.

Hollywood's Like That

This actually happened on the Paramount lot. An economist ordered the wardrobe department to patronize a new cleaner, who had underbid the regular scouring agent 30 per cent. After a day's work, a satin gown worn by a star had to be renovated—and it was sent to the cut-rater.

The following morning it came back cleaned—but six inches short and too snug all over.

"Look at the thing!" she yelped.

All remaining sequences of the flicker required that the star wear the same frock. So what happened? So the production was held up while an exact duplicate of the dress was made. With all hands idle.

Cost: $4,000.

The Morning Mail

"Maybe," maybes Izzy Elinson, "they really oughta take the stock market over to Jersey. A trip on the water—might do it a lotta good. I have one objection, though. I'd hate to lose my shirt where there are so many mosquitoes.

"And, have you noticed how many bankers who used to spend the summer on the water—spent the summer on bread and water? Not enough, if you asked me."

By Way of Report

The gazettes have been full of Sally Rand stories recently. Miss Rand is the young lady who won renown as a fan dancer at the World's Fair. The other day Sally went to court again. This time over a fight with a night club manager. But this fact is interesting. Sally, once a Wampas Baby Star, showgirl'd in Broadway attractions. And her current wage totals $3,750 per week.

She receives $2,500 from a theater, $1,000 at the fair and $250 from the night club. The low wage at the night club is explained in this manner: Because when she was broke the owner (with whom she is feuding) fed her!

The Lowdown

A well-known director was reading statements given the newspapers by a prominent film couple announcing their impending divorce. Each expressed the heighest regard for the other, and hoped to enjoy each other's company in the future and better luck, etc.

"The girl means all the nice things she says about him," continued the director. "I was at their house lots of times when he choked them out of her!"

The Retort Proper

Jerry Lester will shortly make his debut on Broadway at the Hollywood rendezvous. Danny Dare imported him from the Ballyhoo Club in Hollywood, Cal., where Lester was trained well in the art of snapping back at hecklers.

There was the night, frinstance, when a faded actress, a little "blind," interrupted Jerry with this:

"Aw—that joke was good when it was new!"

In Fewer Words

You've Met Him

It happened in one of the later places. An actor, idle for years, sat in a corner staring gloomily into space.

"He's always brooding," observed an all-nighter, "he'll never make any coin sitting around scratching his head that way."

"That guy might," sarcastically said another, "when he had a lotta money—that's where it went."

Baxter Wins His Moll In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Genteel gangster and lady-like molls make a stirring picture of "Penthouse," based on the Arthur Somers Roche romance, and crowds at the Penn Theater hung breathlessly upon the scenes of murder and the sallies of wit. For these gangsters can shoot straight and these molls can hurl a wisecrack across the Grand Canyon. In their midst is Warner Baxter as a lawyer who loses one girl to pick up another, and who does high-power sleuthing to save his first flame's new fellow accused of murdering another moll.

Mr. Seibel

There are good gangsters who sacrifice their lives for their friends, and bad gangsters who own big apartment houses with every facility for rubbing out undesirable visitors. There are good molls who have their manners from Emily Post and their gowns from Vogue, and of these good molls Myrna Loy is the very goodest. Dodging in and out between taxis, up and down elevators and stairs, wearing faultless dress suits and dancing with smooth elegence, these people live in a world where a thousand dollars is always a grand and a dime is unheard of.

It is as gorgeous a world as the Arabian Nights, full of peril as the battle of Gettysburg, and as romantic as Little Red Riding Hood. The bad wolf is in hard luck—but ain't Warner Baxter grand and ain't Myrna Loy sweet?

Sidney Toler has a rather stupid dish-smashing comedy, and Zasu Pitts appears in a brief and bright NRA comic. As for the "Menu" which Thorne Smith has set up for color, any other Smith would do as well.

Important and telling points in the radio speeech of William Randolph Hearst, noted publisher, in which he gives his views on "Inflation, Deflation and Reflation," are presented. Mr. Hearst is seen before the microphone which carried the speech from Los Angeles over a nation-wide hookup on two of the leading networks.

Former President and Mrs. Hoover are seen as they arrive in Chicago and enjoying sights of the World's Fair.

Warner Film Charming

By MARY SHINE

"One Sunday Afternoon" is on the Warner screen, where it began yesterday, and it is charming. It brings laughs, too, but the kind with that lump-in-the-throat quality, and will remind you of the old fable of the man who searched the world over for his fortune and found it at home.

The action opens in the office of Dr. Grimes, dentist, on a Sunday afternoon. An unexpected patient enters—an old rival of the doctor's for the fair hand of Fay Wray. Neil Hamilton plays the pompous patient, and Gary Cooper is cast as the sullen and unhappy Lucius Grimes.

Under the anaesthetic the patient mumbles about the time in his boyhood when he won Fay, the village queen, whom the doctor also loved.

The doctor is carried back to the day he met Fay in a park while the band played "In the Good Old Summer Time." And the successful dentist is again a gangly unlicked cub, the bully of the town. His painfully bashful, coltish antics are riotously funny.

Subsequent scenes inform you that Fay jilted Grimes for Neil, and on the same day they're married. Grimes, on the rebound, weds Frances Fuller, of the elfishly pointed chin and melting eyes.

Their marriage is unhappy, because his wife loves Grimes, but throughout the years he believes himself still in love with Fay. But on that Sunday afternoon in his office Fay comes in to meet her husband, and the doctor is completely disillusioned about her, finding at last that he married "the sweetest girl in the world."

Air Stunt Thrills in Sheridan

"Flying Devils," a story of aerial stunting centering around Arline Judge, a parachute jumper, is the film in the Sheridan Square. It is a melodramatic film in which the romance is a triangle. Bruce Cabot, Eric Linden and Ralph Bellamy have principal roles.

Diggers Dig In Davis

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

"Ladies Must Love," in the Davis, runs true to its name, with a super-abundance of legs, silken gowns, and pretty faces which continually flout their attractiveness.

It's the oft-told story with the usual extravagant setting of four gold diggers who believe in making good in a big, but naughty way. June Knight, of Zeigfeld fame, is the go-gettingest of the quartet until true love comes along in the guise of Neil Hamilton, providentially wealthy. For a playboy, he is guile itself, so the expected tangle arises. But all is set to rights and forgiven when June, unshed tears in her eyes, sings the quite pleasing melody, "I'd Worship Him Just the Same."

Sally O'Neil, Dorothy Burgess, and Mary Carlisle ably provide the comedy relief except where they get in a grand free-for-all hairpulling, which distinctly palls. The tussling, lamp-breaking, dish-throwing only instil a bored reaction in the audience. It's all been done too many times before.

Wine, women, and song, with not too much plot, form the keynote of the story. "Ladies Must Love," they say, so four modern young ladies do love on the Davis screen—in a brazen, see-what-you-can-get way.

Old Timer

THE STORE was jammed. Looking down from the mezzanine, you could see the crowds flowing through the aisles, cascading down the escalators, and pouring through the doors in a ceaseless stream. If you were deliberately looking for him, you might have spotted the Old Timer. His brown fedora bobbed like a cork in the maelstrom, now and then appearing from nowhere, now and then disappearing from sight.

He wasn't much to look at. He was short and thin, and he had a very humble way about him. His eyes were small, and when he smiled—which was often—the crow's feet shot out like tiny bolts of lightning.

He tapped the floorwalker on the arm.

"Pardon me," he murmured politely, "could you direct me to the owner of the store?"

"If it's a complaint," he said coldly, "you can tell it to the manager. I'll get him for you."

"No, no," said the Old Timer. "I have no complaint. This is a personal matter. I want to see Mr. Herman Ginsberg—the store owner."

"Go up those stairs," he said, "and turn to your left. In the rear of the mezzanine you will find the executive offices."

The Old Timer thanked him. In a moment, he was swallowed up in the crowd again, and swept along until he reached the mezzanine stairway. Slowly, with rheumatic stiffness, he climbed upward. When he reached the top, he stopped to catch his breath. He gazed at the immense crowd below, and smiled and shook his head from side to side.

Getting in to see Mr. Herman Ginsberg was not an easy task. The young man was very busy filling his father's shoes. But the Old Timer had patience. And after awhile, he stood before the carved desk in the inner sanctum, with his hat in his hand.

"So you knew my father," said the young man.

The Old Timer nodded.

"Yessir. Many years ago." The crow's feet appeared as he smiled. "You were just a little codger then. That was years before your mother—" he hesitated—"years before she passed on, when your father owned a little shop on the East Side."

The young man sighed.

"Mother always used to say that she'd rather be back in that smelly little dump than here." He smiled faintly. "She said she was happier there."

The Old Timer nodded gravely.

"She was right," he said gently. "Your father had fewer worries then. His mind was content, sort of. Now he's older, and, as the store grows, so do his responsibilities. His health is not what it once was, and—well, I think your mother was right."

"Exactly," said the young man. "But when you're in business, you don't think of those things. Look at father. He's run down so badly that the doctor has sent him to Carlsbad for a whole year."

"I know," murmured the Old Timer. "I read about his sailing last week.

It wasn't until later that the Old Timer said that he needed a job. He was awkward in asking.

"I don't have to tell you," he said, "that jobs are mighty scarce. As a matter of fact, I'm not even filling vacancies as they arise. But, seeing that you knew father back in the old days—well, I think we can do something about it. Do you know anything about elevators?"

The Old Timer shook his head.

"Well," said the young man lightly, "that makes no difference. From now on, you're a starter. And I'm going to give you $10 more than the job usually pays. Come in Monday at 7."

Two weeks later, the Old Timer scrawled "Nick Burgess" on the company payroll as the cashier handed him his first salary. That was the start, and the Old Timer repeated the procedure every two weeks for more than a year.

Then one day, Herman Ginsberg walked up to the Old Timer as he was passing through the store.

The Old Timer's face lit up with a wide smile.

"Gee," he said, "that's great, Mr. Ginsberg. That's just fine. I'm happy for his sake that he's feeling better. Gee." . . .

The arrival of Mr. Eli Ginsberg was quite an event. As a matter of fact, the ceremonies were a bit more elaborate than expected. As the elderly millionaire stepped off the liner, he was met by a very unhappy son.

"And why," queried the old man, "don't you smile for your father? Aren't you happy to see me after a whole year?"

"You know I am," responded the son as they bundled into the car. "I am happier to see you than you can possibly imagine. But there is something I must tell you. Something I hesitate to tell you."

The old man turned toward his son.

"So?" he said. "Well, what is it?"

"The safe robbed?" he repeated. "How? Who did it? How much?"

The young man groaned.

"Miss Perkins has been checking up on the amount all morning. It must be somewhere between ten and eleven thousand. All in cash. Who did it is a mystery. The police have checked everybody except one. They can't find him, somehow."

"And who," he asked, "might that be?"

Herman smiled for the first time that day.

"The one person," he replied, "who would never harm a soul. A little kindly old man whom I hired a year ago. I had no job for him at the time, but I created one for your sake."

"For my sake," repeated the old man. "Why for my sake? Who is this man? What is his name?"

"Nick Burgess," replied the young man. "He said he knew you well, years ago, and that once he had a big business deal with you."

"Nick Burgess," he repeated. "He knew me well, all right. But the only business deal we had was through the District Attorney. Burgess went to prison because he stole $12,000 from me. And now he's done it again!" . . .

Pickford Pen To Be Busy

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 23.—Those reports of Mary Pickford turning author were no idle talk. The star made six definite commitments for short stories, articles and novelettes while she was in the East, and you can look for her first effort to appear in a national magazine before too many issues have passed.

While guarding the subject closely, Mary is even now working on a story at Pickfair, the scene of so many notable Hollywood gatherings, which is now without a master.

Still a new hand at writing, Mary will follow Charlie Chaplin's method in her literary venture. She will dictate to a secretary, then will edit and dictate further drafts until she is satisfied. Studio officials offered to get her a recording machine, but she ruled in favor of a human contact.

One type of story, a biography, Mary has refused to do. Magazine editors and publishers have offered to let her write her own ticket, but she always replies:

"My life may be at its peak. Why write a biography now?"

They're still trying to catch Texas Guinan without an answer. The other night at a Hollywood late spot, Tex was reminiscing about the days when she made 200 western films.

"But how did you find that many stories?" asked a sucker.

Tex let him have it:

Miss Colbert Croons in Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

You'll just have to hear Claudette Colbert croon in "Torch Singer," unusual photoplay of mother love in the Stanley. Her lullabys, sung over the radio, are touching, and are the more effective by seeming to be in strange contrast to the evident character of the singer, which is right in line with the title of the picture. This is the story of an unfortunate girl, mother of a child she has had to abandon to charity and who eventually becomes a singer of hot songs in a cabaret.

Visiting a radio studio where a new broadcast for kiddies is to be made by "Aunt Jenny," she sees the woman who is to make it on the verge of a breakdown, and quickly steps to the mike when she collapses. She improvises something to meet the situation and sings a soothing bedtime melody. She does it so well that you readily believe she thus became an overnight radio star.

So there she is, actually a notorious woman, singing "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Love" in the torrid manner in the night club, tasting deeply of the life such atmosphere connotes, and at the same time the idol of the youngsters of the nation, to whom she sometimes sings a beautiful song with a drink in her hand.

The secret is that she sings childhood refrains from her motherly heart, always remembering her own little one. She has another feeling in her breast, too, bitterness for the father of the child, but the maternal one is the stronger, and the one that eventually brings her happiness, for the finale is a departure from the trite endings that are happy, although this one, of course, is happy, too.

Miss Colbert puts feeling that wins sympathy into this characterization, and she has the support of a good company. Ricardo Cortez is a handsome, affable and humanly understanding manager of the radio studio. Baby Leroy is in the picture, too, but only briefly. David Manners is the man in the case. Charley Grapwein gives a dash of comedy as a broadcast sponsor. Lyda Roberti, Florence Roberts and Virginia Hammond also have some prominence, and acquit themselves nicely.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Girls Who Favor 'Free Love' Should Consider Future

Is marriage a jail sentence?

Will it wreck any modern girl's chance of happiness—and should a wise girl "love 'em and leave 'em," when and if it suits her fancy, rather than risk legal shackles?

Marie thinks it is; it will, and she should. And so—

But read it for yourself. And, as you read, write your own answer, and see if it checks with mine.

Dear Elsie:

I've seen so many unhappy married people that I am not going to take any chances on getting into a wreck like that.

Jack, the man I love, wants me to marry him, but I am convinced that people would be happier if they would just forget that old idea of being tied up to each other; so I have told him that I won't do it that way.

I intend to be wise, and ward off the kind of bad luck so many of my friends have gotten into by putting fetters on each other.

I intend that we shall go to housekeeping together this fall, in a union that shall be free of all strings—that will give us the liberty of going our separate ways, if we find we can't get along, instead of fighting and quarreling and yammering at each other in some ugly divorce court.

There will be no chains on either of us, that way. We won't be thinking we own each other, and so getting careless and disagreeable to each other.

FAVORS 'SAFE' SIDE

Jack doesn't like this idea very much. He is all for being old-fashioned and going in for all the legal fetters. But I think that if I listen to him, and tie myself to him hard and fast, he will think he has me—and he won't take the trouble to try to make me want to stay.

I think that is the big trouble with marriage. People get too sure of each other, and they feel that, because they're tied, they can get away with all sorts of neglect or irritating ways—and the partner won't be able to leave.

None of that for me! I'm going to stay on the safe side, and try to make our life together a real partnership. What do you think about it?

Several of my more modern and independent friends feel the same way as I do about it. They think people are foolish to tie themselves up, when marriage is such a prison. MARIE.

Is marriage a prison? Yes; often it is. And even the happiest marriages hold long spells of dreary discipline and drudgery.

But so does the rest of life!

A "free soul?" There "ain't no such animal," child! No matter how you plan or scheme, you'll find that you're bound. Life will cramp your style, whether you stay single or wed.

THINK OF FUTURE

People will take advantage of you, whether you're married to them or not. Always you'll have to "protect your rights;" fight for happiness; battle boredom. And it isn't any harder to do this in marriage, if you use your head and heart, than it is to do it in any other human relationship.

For there are ring rules in any game and marriage is just a set of ring rules, devised to make things a bit safer and easier for helpless women and children.

They may not be perfect rules. They may not fit every individual case. But they are, as yet, the best break that society has been able to give our sex, sister.

And believe you me, you'll need all the breaks you can get as the years go on, Marie.

"Free Love" may listen swell to a young, popular, pretty girl, but how will it listen to her when her face is lined, and her hair is grey, and the man she's taken a temporary option on walks out, free as air, to take up with a younger, prettier, peppier, giddier gal?

Will it listen pretty to her then?

CUPID-CATCHERS

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

The season is on for a new crop of those entrancing confections that girls and women set upon their curls, and take so much satisfaction in; and wreak so much havoc with upon the hearts and pocketbooks of Cupid and his big strong pals. You have only to hesitate in front of a brilliant plate-glass window for one peek to believe Mimi and Beebe when they tell you that THIS winter's bonnets are too ducky for anything but a fluttering eyelid, more dashing than even their quaint ancestors of spring and summer, more surprising to the eye, infinitely more variable; in short, to stand with both little feet on the earth and use plain language—"cuter than ever!"

Could they be? asks a plain man, who marveled vastly at the hats of yester-month. They be! And there's a hat to harmonize with every girl, and to suit every girl's man in the background.

Tall hats in the back, those flattering feminine tip-tilts that make any nose look cute, black satins that glitter elegantly, knitted clingers that summon up Christmas card dreams, "berrys" that are pulled over one eye and pinioned there with a twinkling pin for dress-up and a queer, knobby silver or bone knick-knack for knock-about. If you don't like a tall hat on your beloved, kind sir, there are plenty of pancakes. If you don't like "berrys," there are brief turbans, scant affairs in velvet and suede and wool with a tiny feather pointing straight to heaven.

There are a few brimmed velvets and satins to be picture in; but most of the darling chapeaux are just a handful of something, pulled by a genius this way or that, to sit precariously atop a lady when she goes forth to hunt. To hunt a sweetheart; or to hunt her own husband with her new frock and bonnet. I firmly maintain that woman dresses for man. That a wife goes forth chiefly to charm her own husband—if possible. Look out, husbands, sweethearts and Cupid, the new hats are in town! —NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Sending Birth Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have some birth announcements I wish to mail to friends and relatives. I have a brother-in-law who is married. I do not care for his wife. Should I send the card just addressed to him, or would it be better not to send any at all, knowing that she will feel the slight keenly? C.

Even though you aren't particularly fond of your brother-in-law's wife, it would be the mannerly thing for you to address the announcement to both wife and husband. It would be rather ridiculous of you to make such a point of your dislike in a circumstance that can't make much difference to you.

Wedding Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young man in our office (small office) is to be married. I have met the bride-to-be once, and speak to her almost every day on the telephone, when she calls the groom-to-be. The fellow employes are not giving a gift (I am, of course, speaking for our own office), neither I believe will any of us receive an invitation to the wedding, due principally to the fact that it is a mixed marriage and of course only the necessary people will be present.

1—What I wish to know is, would a gift to the couple from myself be out of place? I have known the young man for about a year and a-half.

2—I presume one sends the gift to the bride-to-be, and also that it is correct to simply enclose one's calling card?

F.

1—From what you tell me, I should think that it would be an entirely unnecessary gesture for you to send a wedding present. Indeed, I should think that it would be a very forced thing for you to do.

2—Yes, if you do send a gift, it should be sent to the bride-to-be, and the visiting-card should be enclosed. It is not necessary to write a message on the card, but this may be done if you wish.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

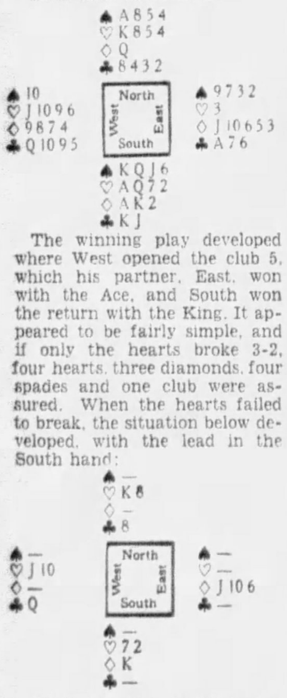
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The News of Bridge

When all is said and done, the real news of Contract Bridge is the hand delt at the table and what its holder does with it. Thus in every contest between teams, whether in Rubber or Duplicate play, there seems to turn up a crucial hand which decides almost by itself the outcome of the match. The test of greatness in Bridge, as in life, is how you rise to the opportunities confronting you.

From Mr. George C. Tilley of Ann Arbor, Michigan, comes the story of a hand played in a team-of-four Duplicate match in that city, which was the deciding factor in the victory. The wining team, holding the North and South hands, reached a contract of six notrump. Inasmuch as others had played the hand in three notrump and made five, the different bidding was the determining factor in the result. The hand was:

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The winning play developed where West opened the club 5, which his partner, East, won with the Ace, and South won the return with the King. It appeared to be fairly simple, and if only the hearts broke 3-2, four hearts, three diamonds, four spades and one club were assured. When the hearts failed to break, the situation below developed, with the lead in the South hand:

Obviously the contract was made, as the lead of the diamond King forestalled the possibility of further defense.

The hand is an interesting one, and a squeeze would be very hard to develop against an Opening heart lead, for instance. One team played the hand at six spades, against which West opened the heart Knave. South won with the heart Queen and then led out all the trumps. He followed with the Ace of hearts, learning at this point the unfavorable division of that suit.

South saw the possibility of a squeeze if the club Ace was in the East hand and the Queen-ten-nine in the West. He therefore entered Dummy with the diamond Queen, and led a small club toward the King, hoping that East would win with the Ace. Had East done so, it is obvious that, as the cards lie, the contract could have been made. However, East had an accurate count on the South hand and knew that it did not contain a singleton club. East also saw the possibilities of the squeeze and that West might be compelled to throw away his defense either in hearts or in clubs. He therefore played low, and South won the trick with the club King, but was unable to make his contract as both East and West could now contribute to the defense of the hand. It is entirely possible—in fact, extremely probable—if the club lead had been made before all the trumps were drawn that South would have made his contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

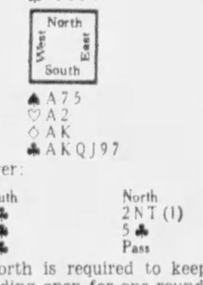
South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.
Part-score: North-South 60.



Answer:

South	North
2 ♣	2 N T (1)
4 ♣	5 ♣
6 ♣	Pass

1—North is required to keep the bidding open for one round. He should not raise the clubs at once, because the hand does not contain 1 plus honor-trick in addition to adequate trump support.

Avis Admits Theft of Letter

"Oh! oh!" Avis Arlen blustered, as I finished my indictment of her. "How cruel of you! And how false!"

She put her face in her hands and began to weep a bit noisily. But I was sure that she was looking between her fingers to see how this last frenzied effort to protest her innocence would strike me.

"How long are you going to keep this up, Avis?" I asked coolly. "I warn you that my patience is nearly exhausted. Either you're going to acknowledge the truth to me, here and now, or as soon as I can reach a telephone I am going to inform Mr. Veritzen of what you have done."

"You—have—no proof," she said feebly; so faintly, in fact, that I knew her defenses were at an end and that she was ready to capitulate.

"That is where you are mistaken," I told her. "I have a number of proofs"—I justified my exaggeration by her own falsehoods—"but these two ought to be sufficient to show you that I know exactly of what I am talking."

I tapped my forefinger significantly on the back of the envelope which I held.

"I sealed this letter myself, Avis," I said slowly. "I always know exactly how I seal a letter, and can tell whether or not anyone has tampered with it. This envelope has been opened cleverly, by steaming, and then sealed again."

"But that is no proof that I did it," she said.

ADDITIONAL PROOF

"Listen, please, until I finish," I went on inexorably. "There was no one else with your motive. Mrs. Underwood put this in the post box herself. It is most unlikely it was lost in the mail, and exceedingly improbable that anyone else in the Veritzen organization would have any object in opening a personal letter from me to Mr. Veritzen."

"I could think of a number of reasons," she said silkily, but with a venom that I understood.

"No one else could," I told her with decision, "but I am not resting on that premise alone to condemn you, although I am sure that if Mr. Veritzen knew of your possession of the letter upon this day so long after its being mailed, he would consider that I had ample proof of your theft."

She flung up her head at the brutal word, which I had used purposely, but except for another explosive "Oh! Oh!" she did not protest the epithet.

"But I have a more crushing proof than that," I went on relentlessly, then paused, with full knowledge of the dramatic and psychological value of my hesitation.

She did not want to speak. I knew that. But I kept my eyes fixed upon her compellingly, and, as if something outside of her own volition extracted the words, she murmured faintly:

"What proof?"

"In the first place," I began slowly, "no one—no one in this vicinity or in the city—outside of our immediate family, Maj. Grantland and Lee Chow, know that the wedding is to take place. Not even Noel's father—because of the delay of this letter—knew anything about it. It was impossible for you to have found out about the wedding in any other way than by reading this letter. Yet yesterday, when you met Maj. Grantland upon the street, you told him of Noel's intended wedding, even to the date of it."

CONFESSES TO MADGE

She raised her head and looked at me with what I guessed was a last stand of defiance.

"Suppose," she said, "that I should tell you—No-el, himself, wrote me he was going to be married?"

"It is utterly hopeless, I see, Avis, to deal with you as if you were a reasoning human being; utterly useless to waste my sympathy upon you. It is time for your train. Go where you choose.? Do whatever you wish. I am going to get Mr. Veritzen on the phone at once."

She flung herself upon me, gasping. I had won! I saw that, in her baffled, sullen eyes and in her terror-stricken face.

"Don't do that!" she pleaded. "Did you mean it? Will you help me if—"

Her voice trailed off into silence. I put my hands upon her shoulders, gripping them, and held her eyes with mine.

"Only if you tell me the truth, Avis," I said, and for once I saw her look ashamed.

"That's the truth," she said sullenly, "what you said. I took the letter and read it."

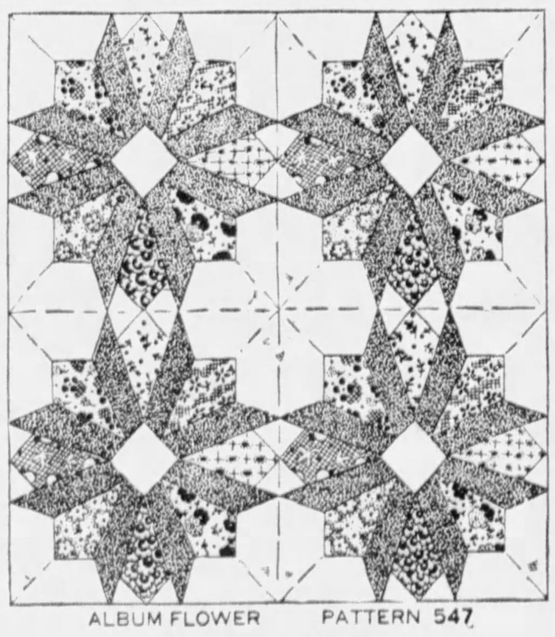
AN IDEAL FRIENDSHIP QUILT



ALBUM FLOWER PATTERN 547

By LAURA WHEELER

In the early days of quiltmaking, certain types of quilts found special favor. The album quilt was one of these. True to its name, it served the same purpose as the old-time autograph album. Friends embroidered their names—sometimes in cross stitch, sometimes in outline stitch—in the center of the block, which was always of a plain material. The Album Flower pattern is an ideal Friendship Quilt, for besides having a center square for the autograph, it is made of scraps, thus permitting each friend to contribute her own materials.

Pattern 547 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Infection a Danger of Foot Ills

Many of my readers will agree with me that a corn is an annoying and sometimes really distressing affliction. It is one of the most common ailments of modern civilization. It is probable that our remote forefathers rarely, if ever, had this trouble.

Dr. Copeland

In spite of the misery caused by a corn and the constant reminder of its presence, I venture to say that no other disturbance of the human body is more neglected.

The application of a corn salve, paring the corn, and other household measures are not curative, although they may give temporary relief.

These methods sometimes lead to serious inflamation of the foot. Severe blood poisoning may result from the careless handling and home treatment of a corn.

Though a corn may form on any portion of the skin, it usually involves one of the toes. Frequently it is due to the wearing of improperly fitted shoes. They press upon the toes and cause irritation.

A corn is really nothing more than thickened skin that has resulted from long continued irritation. At times the corn is extremely painful, tender to the touch and considerably inflamed.

The corn is surrounded by a sac. Unless this is removed with the corn, the condition cannot be cured. It will be seen, then, why local applications are of so little value in overcoming this painful condition.

A recent article in the journal of the American Medical Association states that too little attention is paid to this affliction. It points out that, as I have told you, complete cure is only possible by the thorough removal of the corn and sac by a simple surgical operation. The operation need cause no alarm or hesitancy on the part of the sufferer. It is done under local anesthesia and can be performed in the surgeon's office. When the corn and sac are completely removed it is seldom that the affliction returns.

Wise and careful choice of footwear will insure good foot health. In addition to this, it will help the general health of the individual. It must not be overlooked that poor foot health often leads to certain nervous disorders and other general complaints.

Household Hints

Gooseberries will not split whilst cooking if the sugar and water are boiled before the fruit is added.

If, after emptying dust from the bag of your vacuum cleaner, a few damp tea leaves are put inside and the bag shaken, all superfluous dust will cling to the tea leaves and leave the bag clean.

When removing grease spots from clothes, mix half a teaspoon of ammonia with a teaspoon of alcohol and rub it on with a damp cloth. You will find that this will remove them very quickly.

Before papering a damp wall, give the bare walls three good coatings with the waterglass used for preserving eggs. Be sure to let each coating dry thoroughly before applying another. Dampness will never penetrate walls treated in this way.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Warts have strange habits. They come and go, and nobody knows exactly why. Touching them with castor oil every day for a week or two will banish the weak-willed ones. Moles must not be tampered with. A skin specialist has various ways of removing them. Moth patches should be caught young, treated with a strong bleach. They are giant freckles, caused by a change in the pigment of the skin.

Moisture in the palms of the hands is caused by nervousness; anything that helps toward health-building will be of service. After bathing the hands with soap and water, rinse in tepid water, dry, pour into the palms a few drops of vinegar which acts as an astringent and discourages sweat glands. At night dust the palms with borated talcum. Scatter talcum into gloves before slipping them on. Drink plenty of water, eat simple nourishing food at regular hours, bathe daily, sleep restfully.

White hair is beautiful on the other woman. When the first white threads appear there's a panicky feeling, one wants to put up a fight. No reason why one shouldn't. Hair dyeing is done with successful results. One must just be careful to gather information, hit upon the right medium, use it properly. But the gal who would keep the pristine color of her glory crown must remember that the first dye ducking doesn't end her worries. Every month or six weeks white hair that appears close to the scalp must be touched up. She's in for a life-long job.

Fashion Flashes

Our feathered friends will admire your hat if you choose one of the smart new afternoon hats with ostrich trim. A lovely brimmed hat with the medium brim, irregularly shaped, is of black taupe and is trimmed with blue and red ostrich tips placed at the side, front and back.

Take a nip in at the waistline of the new coat, for smartness. The nipped-in coat used in a new suit of black and white checked woolen is long and of hour-glass silhouette, has padded rolls at the shoulder and modified leg-o'-mutton sleeves. The high neck fastening is diagonal.

Tear leaves off the calendar and you'll find yourself wearing a taupe brown dress, most likely in fine woolen or faille. Your hat will be a smart little model in matching velvet with tiny little ostrich tips posed against the hair by the ear. And a little cape of mink or sable dyed squirrel will complete a lovely picture.

Psst!

An inkling of what's going to come! Psst! We're tipping you off that something is due to happen in the Sun-Telegraph Monday, September 25.

DUQUESNE MUST AVOID OVERCONFIDENCE

If any opponent to be met later in the fall figured Duquesne University might be a little shy on offensive football power this year, there is likely to be a speedy revision of the dope sheets after the 25-to-0 victory over West Virginia Wesleyan with which Capt. Al Krankota and his mates last night followed up their 18-to-6 success against Waynesburg in the opener one week earlier. A total of 43 points in the first two games against such fighting foes as the Wolfpack and the Bobcats would appear to indicate that the Layden attack is going places this season. Last night's score, marking Duquesne's first win over this rival since 1930, stands out as the largest rolled up against Wesleyan since New York U. beat the Buckhannon gridders 54 to 0 early in 1931.

Al Krankota

What the Dukes have got to guard against now is overconfidence. They're off to a fine start, but there's much harder work to come, and the going won't be so smooth in the remainder of the schedule, starting with the big game against West Virginia University at Forbes Field next Friday night. Better football than beat Waynesburg and Wesleyan will be required to cope with the tough opposition to be faced from now on to the finish.

JACKSON FINDS THIRD EASIER THAN SHORT

Many fans thought that Travis Jackson, on account of his trick knees, might not be able to hold up on the job of finishing the season at third base for the Giants in place of Johnny Vergez. Even the club management gave evidence of having some doubt on that score when it brought Charley Dressen up from Nashville as an insurance policy.

But Jackson himself never had any such fear. He has progressed so smoothly and enjoyed his new job so much that he wants to know how long the third-base racket has been going on. Jax declares that, as compared with shortstop, the hot corner is a picnic. If you stop a smash you're a hero, and if you boot one it was too hot to handle. The veteran says he sighs every time he thinks of all the years he put in running his legs off at shortstop, and concludes that third base is just the spot for an old-timer like himself.

MUNGO TAKES EARLY STAND AGAINST CUT

Dizzy Dean may have gained the distinction of being the first baseball holdout for 1934, and at that before the close of the season of 1933, but Van Lingle Mungo, of the Dodgers, isn't far behind the Cardinal pitcher in making known his views on one angle of the salary question for next year. Mungo already has served notice that he will not accept a cut, even before he has been asked to take one.

The smoke-baller declares that he has established himself as a major league pitcher this season, and that if the front office tries to reduce his pay next year he will refuse to sign. Mungo evidently has come to think pretty well of himself. He says that since June he has been as effective as any other pitcher in the National League, and adds that he's not excluding any of the Giants.

BREAK WITH CAREY MEANS STRIPP TRADE

Another Brooklyn player is not in the slightest doubt about his status. He is Third Baseman Joe Stripp. The former Red is going to be traded and knows it. He has realized that his days as a Dodger are numbered ever since a smoldering ill feeling between Manager Max Carey and himself culminated in an open break some time ago and Carey moved Tony Cuccinello over to third base while the club was playing here.

Joe Stripp

Some of the rumors in connection with the proposed trading of Stripp have said that the management considers him too brittle, out too often with injuries. But Stripp says the real reason is that he was accused of having been after Carey's job as manager of the club before Max was signed to a new contract for 1934. Joe denies the charge, but it is no secret that he and Carey have come to the parting of the ways and that a winter deal for the disposal of the third sacker is planned. A left-hand pitcher will be sought in exchange for him.

RUTH TO PITCH FINAL GAME FOR YANKEES

The Yankees' closing game of the season against the Red Sox in New York one week from tomorrow will see Babe Ruth back in the role in which he came up to the majors 19 years ago. At his own request, Ruth will be allowed to start the game in the pitcher's box, and he hopes to go the full nine innings, though confessing to having some doubt about his wind.

It won't be the Babe's first appearance on the mound this year. In compliance with a request from the owners of the Indianapolis club, he pitched three innings of an exhibition game in that city when the Yanks were in the West in May. At that time Ruth denied having any serious intention of ever pitching regularly again, but now New York fans are wondering if he is thinking of starting the training trip next spring with a view to coming back as a hurler.

ARE THOSE PROS BIG? KARCIS AT QUARTER

Maybe you thought you were looking at some big boys when you got a load of some of the players in the opening National League game here Wednesday night between the Pittsburgh and New York teams, but wait until you see a few of the performers on other elevens in the circuit. Pro football is a strenuous sport, and though here and there a player of only average size but uncommon ability may be able to get by in some particular position, in the main they've got to be big and tough to stand the gaff.

John Karcis

There is the experience of John Karcis, for example. You remember him, of course, as former fullback at Carnegie Tech and one of the biggest and huskiest battering rams that ever smashed a line around here. Well, Karcis went in for pro football after leaving Carnegie and joined Benny Friedman's Brooklyn team in the National League. Reporting to Friedman for fullback duty, the former Plaid star was asked how much he weighed, and proudly replied that he scaled 218 pounds in condition. Karcis got the jolt of his life when Friedman told him he was too light for fullback and that it would be necessary to start him in at quarterback.

SERIES RIVALS BOAST CRACK INFIELDS

(This article, dealing with the infields, is the third of a series of five comparing the different departments of the Giants and Senators who will clash in the coming World Series.)

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The above rating appears to be the proper way to classify the brilliant first defense players who will do their stuff when the World Series opens at the Polo Grounds, New York, one week from Thursday.

At the outset of this article a draw decision is given relative to the capabilities of the New York and Washington infields. They have so many marks of similarity that it might be unfair to say that either is more efficient than the other.

STAR COMBINATIONS

The Terry-Critz-Ryan-Jackson quartet combines skill, rare spirit, resourcefulness and punch, and when you move over to the Capitol City you observe the same characteristics as you watch the Senatorial foursome—Kuhel-Myer-Cronin-Bluege.

At first base, you must give Memphis Bill a big advantage over Kuhel, despite the high rating placed upon the clever lad who stars around the gateway post for the Senators. Terry is a great fielder, and what a punch he carries at the plate!

There is little to choose as between Hughey Critz and Buddy Meyer around the keystone sack. Buddy packs a heftier punch then the picturesque Dixie boy, but Hughey is so cunning and is such a fine fielder he balances the scales.

Manager Joe Cronin takes up the slack in Terry's favor at first when you compare Joe with Blondy Ryan. Yes, Cronin would seem to do more than that in this comparison, and this is said with due respect to the fighting qualities of Ryan.

JACKSON A "NATURAL"

Third base offers another near draw. Travis Jackson earned his fame as a great shortstop, but any good shortfielder should be a top-notcher at third. In Ossie Bluege, the Senators have a reliable and veteran fielder and a dangerous hitter.

In young Bob Boken, Cronin appears to have the best bet among the utility infielders. Johnny Kerr also is available for duty on the infield. Bill Terry can call upon Byrne James, and possibly Johnny Vergez, although the latter, recovering from an appendix operation, may be able to do no more than hit. Charley Dressen, a late arrival, is not on the list of New York eligibles, but permission might be given for Dressen to play.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: A SPONTANEOUS ADDITION TO LIFE—Julius Brittlebank, who recently has celebrated his seventy-fourth birthday anniversary, has made 14 pleasure trips around the world in the last 14 years. Traveling around the world in a westerly direction, he has crossed the International Date Line 14 times. This line is an imaginary delineation in the Pacific in the vicinity of the meridional line 180 degrees from Greenwich, where the reckoning of the calendar day changes. East of this line the day is dated one day earlier than west of it. Brittlebank, crossing in a westerly direction on each occasion has added an imaginary day to his life.

By JESS CARVER

The Dukes gave the West Virginia Wesleyan jinx, which has brought much grief to Night Rider adherents the past two years, a thorough trouncing last night at Forbes Field and freed themselves of a bad ball game in the doing, but bright and shining in a game that otherwise was pretty dull, emerged the figure of a new and formidable Red and Blue halfback threat, young Jim Filingham.

Duquesne won last night's game, the second of the season, 25 to 0, and might have added an additional two or three touchdowns had the boys applied the pressure of which they are capable and not been so afflicted with that most dreaded of all gridiron diseases, fumbilitis. On five occasions the Duquesne backs fumbled and four times the miscues were recovered by Bobcatmen. The 'Cats also were plenty butterfingered, turning in a quintet of fozzles, only one of which was recovered by Duquesne.

SCORES TWO TOUCHDOWNS

Filingham, a second-string halfback, was the star of the game. He's shown some promise in the past, but last night he definitely put in a bid for a varsity job. Two splendid runs, one of 45 and the other of 43 yards, both good for touchdowns, were Filingham's contributions to the Duquesne score, and on both occasions he demonstrated his ability to get going with a maximum of speed, to fool enemy tacklers and to cut back and dodge.

A continuation of this brand of football and Coach Elmer Layden will have to petition for permission to employ a five-man backfield or make room on the bench for one of the present starters.

The Dukes started off in a highly impressive fashion, marching 60 yards after receiving the initial kickoff to score, DeLuca ploughing over from the eight-yard line. Zaninelli's placement try for the seventh point went awry.

With the shock troops in the action, including Mister Filingham, Duquesne counted again as the second period opened. Lugging the ball on the first play, Filingham skipped off right tackle, reversed his field and chased over the line. This time, Vodini, sub

IMMACULATE HEART TRAILS IN TITLE SERIES

LOCAL TOSSERS NEED DOUBLE WIN TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

The St. Stanislaus nine, of Youngstown, and the Immaculate Heart tossers, local hopes, resume play in the final series for the National Baseball Federation championship here today, with the Ohioans holding a one-game advantage.

The teams are to clash at Forbes Field in a doubleheader. The Pittsburghers must win both games to annex the title as a result of having lost in the first contest of the series at Greenlee Field yesterday, 4 to 3.

The Buckeyes put the game on ice in the final inning after the locals had staged a thrilling rally to come from behind and tie up the game. The locals played poor baseball and threw away several opportunities to win.

Fox has been doing most of his team's hitting, and it seemed good business to put him on first base. He singled, however, and the game was over. The score:

In the third period, Filingham broke loose again and went prancing over for his second score. Vodini's second try for the extra point was a foozle.

ZANESKI SCORES

A few minutes later, a 25-yard pass, hurled by Zaneski and expertly caught by Steve Marin, put the ball on the two-yard line and Zaneski plunged it over on the first try. Marin missed the extra point this time.

The Bobcats had the will, but were too light and too slow. They failed to register a single first and 10 against 16 for the Dukes, missed all four of their five pass attempts, three being intercepted. The Dukes took to the air 16 times and completed five.

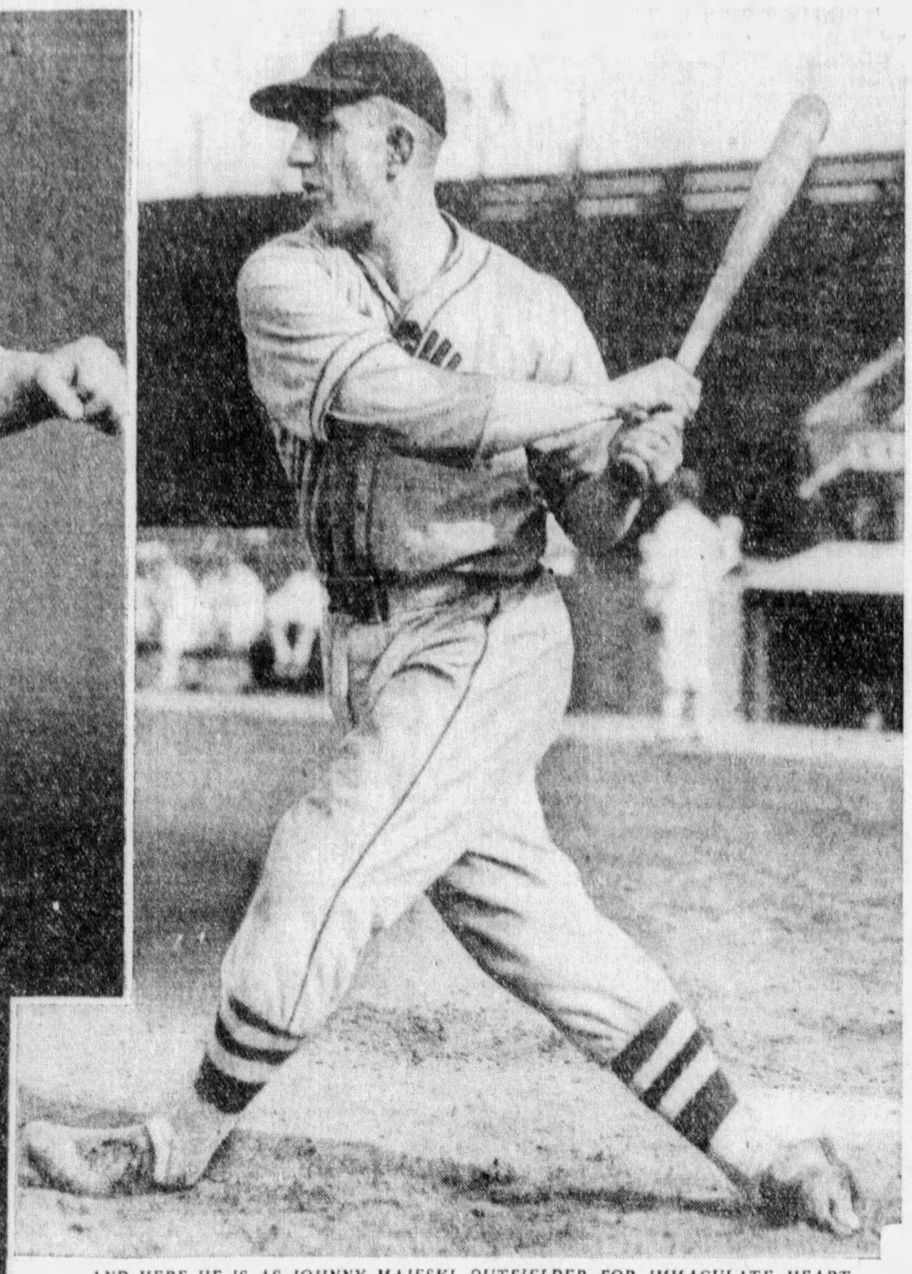
JOHNNY WINDSOR AS A PROFESSIONAL BOXER



AND HERE HE IS AS JOHNNY MAJESKI, OUTFIELDER FOR IMMACULATE HEART

An all-round athlete who first gained fame as a boxer under the name of Johnny Windsor, and then dropped out of the limelight, Johnny Majeski has popped right back into it as a star outfielder for the Immaculate Heart team representing Pittsburgh in the National Baseball Federation finals. SPORT VIGNETTES

Penn State is starting off on its forty-seventh football season next week . . . Just three members of the Giants and Senators who clashed in the world series of 1924, the last time these two teams were rivals in the classic, still are members of the outfits . . . They are Manager Bill Terry and Travis Jackson, of the Giants, and Goose Goslin, of the Senators . . . It will be recalled that it was the National League pennant race of that year which caused the banishment from Organized Baseball of Jimmy O'Connell, a young outfielder, and Cozy Dolan, coach of the Giants, when Heine Sand, of the Phillies, reported that he had been approached and asked not to bear down in a series which meant the pennant for the Giants.

While the Pittsburgh Pirates' football team did not get off to a winning start in its opening National League game here against the New York Giants the other night, it did pack in the fans at low prices and left them talking, which augurs well for big gates during the remainder of the season . . . Some of the fans were disappointed because the locals did not show more in the way of an attack against the better co-ordinated Giants, but they did come away thrilled by the play of the former college stars, and, if Harry Newman could be brought back for another game he'd jam the park . . . Other famous stars will show here with the other teams, and they may be counted upon to lure out the faithful.

The drawing power shown by the Pros gave the colleges something to think about, too . . . It was conclusively demonstrated that, if given a good show at prices within their reach, the fans will be glad to patronize the offerings in profuse numbers.

In connection with the failure of the attack of the Pirates to click in their first start, a story is going around town that the visitors were tipped off to the signals of the locals and thus were able to check every move before it was well under way . . . This may or may not be true.

The Pirates are bound to show better in their later games . . . For the most part they are made up of players who are just out of college and more or less unaccustomed to the style of play of the professionals . . . Virtually all of them were outstanding college players around whom the attack of their teams was built . . . As soon as they are able to co-ordinate their play they should start going places.

The secret ambition of Ted Yarosz, Monaca's middleweight boxing championship claimant, is to be a doctor of medicine . . . He is tutoring up to gain enough credits to enter college . . . He'd rather be a medico than the champion with all of its glamour, which is not hard to believe, in view of his retiring disposition.—HARRY KECK.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23.—The Pirates and Cardinals are slated to end up their season's warfare in an epidemic of doubleheaders. Dual bills this afternoon and tomorrow will complete their interclub play for the campaign.

The two teams were idle yesterday because of rain. The canceled game was moved back to this afternoon. The bargain bill listed for tomorrow had been arranged previously by moving up Tuesday's contest.

Ralph Birkofer and Heinie Meine are slated to go to the slab for the Buccos this afternoon. They may be opposed by Dizzy Dean and Bill Hallahan.

SCHOOL TEAMS FACE TESTS

By JULIUS LEVIN

Three members of the City High School League invade foreign soil today to engage in their opening football games, two of them opposing class AA teams, while the third battles with the defending champions in the class A group.

Coach Walter Gross takes his Schenley High School eleven to Wilkinsburg, while Ray Peters takes his Oliver High School machine to Turtle Creek Union in the two contests with class AA opponents. Allegheny High School, coached by Harry Springer, faces a real tartar in its inaugural by engaging Moe Rubenstein's undefeated Ambridge eleven at Ambridge.

AMBRIDGE UNBEATEN

Ambridge, undefeated in nine games last season when it was crowned class A champion of the W. P. I. A. L., already has stretched the victory string to 10 in a row by swamping Monaca in its opener last Saturday.

Six other members of the class AA race swing into action today, Jeannette, co-champion in the double A group last season, engages Scottdale, Norwin clashes with East McKeesport, Washington is host to Waynesburg, Greensburg battles with Youngwood, Clairton opposes Hurst and New Kensington swings into action with Verona.

CARRICK, PEABODY TIE

Carrick and Peabody battled to a 6-6 tie, a 70-yard run by Roberts, Peabody Negro halfback accounting for the East Enders' score. A 48-yard forward pass, McClelland to Hoffman, enabled Carrick to tie the score.

Westinghouse defeated Braddock, 12 to 0; Dormont toppled Langley, 13-0; Perry won over Allerdice, 12 to 6; South invaded Washington and defeated Trinity, 18 to 7, and Mt. Lebanon won over Crafton, 18 to 6.

Homestead and Rankin fought to a scoreless tie and Scott and McKeesport tied at 6-6; Duquesne took Monessen, 13 to 7; Carnegie nosed out Bridgeville, 13-10; Monongahela trounced West Newton, 37-0; Har-Brack found Oakmont easy, 33-0; Ellwood City was no match for New Castle, losing 41 to 0; Elizabeth won over Brentwood, 6-0, and Burgettstown beat Canonsburg, 12-0 in other district tussles.

Army Grid Team Flies to Game

ELKINS, W. Va., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Ten airplanes roared into Elkins yesterday, bringing a United States Army football squad from Langley Field, Va., which meets Davis-Elkins today.

The air trip was made from Langley Field in three hours.

ALCOMA GOLFERS WIN

The Alcoma golfers defeated Wildwood, 83 to 42, in the second and final interclub match of the season at Alcoma yesterday, retaining possession of the W. H. Nichols trophy for the third year in a row.

NETTERS GAIN SEMI-FINALS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Ralph Bald, first seeded ace, battles his Mt. Lebanon teammate, Paul DeJohn, and Bob Burnett, second of the select group, meets Bill Miller in the semi-final contests of the eleventh annual Harvard Cup interscholastic titular singles net tourney on the P. A. A. lot today. At 3 o'clock Dr. John and Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, Winged Head stars, meet the brilliant Edgeworth pair, Bob Schmertz and King Moore, in penultimate fray of the first Stanton Heights invitation men's doubles conclave.

DeJohn won right to encounter Bald by downing Jimmy Arensberg, 6-4, 6-2, yesterday afternoon. Miller edged out a 11-9, 10-8 win over Keller Pollock.

Burnett downed Larry Blatt, Central Catholic dark horse, 6-4, 6-2.

Frank Broida and McCook Reed attained the Stanton final yesterday with 6-1, 3-6, 6-0 decision over Bob Lampus and Bud Leyda. In a quarter-final match, Schmertz and Moore accounted for Sam Keller and Bill Servick, of College Avenue, 6-1, 6-1.

The Pittsburgh-Leechburg interurban court joust, slated for the Leechburg Tennis Club today, has been postponed at request of Dr. Bischoff, captain of the Kiski Valley crew. No later date has been fixed.

Carnegie Swat Star As Buffalo Wins

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Before the largest crowd in Buffalo's baseball history, the hard-slugging Bisons last night won the International League baseball crown by defeating the Rochester Red Wings, 8-1, winning the fourth game of their four-out-of-seven series.

Some 24,000 fans jammed the stadium to see the Red Wings swamped under the big bats of Ollie Carnegie, Len Koenecke and Gregg Mulleavy, and held powerless by the steady pitching of Southpaw Charley Perkins.

The victory of the Bisons qualified them to meet Columbus, of the American Association, in the little world series. The series opens tomorrow in Columbus.

Denver Pro Leads In Nebraska Open

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Nebraska's golfers took their game seriously today in the hope of ousting invaders from other states from the lead as the $2,000 Nebraska open tournament swung into its second 18-hole round with Ky Laffoon, 24-year-old Denver pro, heading the procession with a score of 67.

The young Denver golfer was five strokes under par in the first 18-hole round of medal play, followed by 110 others from 13 states. Fifteen entrants bested par in the first round.

By HEARTLY W. (HUNK) ANDERSON

Notre Dame Football Coach.

Have they stopped the Notre Dame system? We hear that question a great deal among football fans, and particularly among friends of the Fighting Irish. My reply will be found in the following article.

Hunk Anderson

Many recent changes in the rules have benefited defensive football, but have slowed up offense. The elimination of the flying block, the rule which provides that the ball is dead when any part of a player's body except hands or feet touches the ground, the rule which declares a fumbled ball dead at the point of recovery, all place the defensive team at advantage, although some of them work to mutual advantage.

Almost every coach in the past few years has become elastic in his ideas about defensive football. He must have several defenses to stop the various offenses which are thrown at him.

But the wits of the coaches have been given an even more severe trial in designing new offensive twists which will work against various defenses.

The coach who doesn't plan plays which will work against any kind of defense is lost. Some of them still are planning offenses for a seven-man line, and their teams are trying to make these plays work against a six-man or five-man line.

Notre Dame, playing a nine-game schedule, meets at least six different types of defense a season. Some teams use as many as three defenses against us in one game.

MANY DEFENSES USED

Drake and Kansas last year used a seven-man line and a diamond. By diamond, I mean one player behind the center, two halfbacks behind and to the right and left of this man, and the quarterback, or safety man, further back and behind the center.

Kansas also used a seven-man line, three men behind the line, and a safety man further back, the 3-3-1 offense.

Navy used a 7-2-2 defense, the usual defense of Notre Dame-trained coaches and the one we use almost exclusively at Notre Dame. It is sometimes called the "seven and box" defense. There are seven men in the line. Two men behind the tackles, and two more directly behind them.

Haskell last year used a 6-2-2-1 defense, and we were able to run many plays down the middle, wedging the secondary men out to the sides.

Northwestern used a novelty defense against us for a while last fall. It is the 5-4-2 or "butterfly." The ends, guards and center are on the line of scrimmage. The tackles and halfbacks are on the second line of defense. The fullback and quarterback are in the third line of defense.

Army used a 6-1-2-2 defense last year, after using the now famous 6-3-2 the previous year. Both Pittsburgh and Southern California used the 6-3-2 last year.

The fact that Army beat us in 1931 and both Pitt and Southern California beat us last year with the 6-3-2 has led many people to believe that the Notre Dame system is definitely stopped.

FALSE IMPRESSION

That is a decidedly false impression. We have plays that should gain against any defense if our men execute them correctly. We have plays designed for individual defenses and which probably might not gain against any other defense. It was merely a question of man-power in those defeats. Army, Pitt and Southern California all had great lines when they defeated us, lines that would have stopped us just as effectively using any other defense.

It takes inventive ability on the part of the coach, if he doesn't want to be left behind in the dust. As I said, the coaches, whether using the Rockne, Warner or some other system of football, have to make changes in their offenses to keep up with the rules and with changes in the defenses. There will be changes at Notre Dame their year.

Mrs. Wendt Wins Cambridge Event

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, Pa., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—A splendid back nine after she had used 49 shots going out, enabled Mrs. C. I. Wendt, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, to win first honors yesterday in the final 18-hole event of the women's invitation tournament at Riverside Golf Club.

Mrs. Wendt's 91 was two shots ahead of May McCune, of the Allegheny Country Club, with whom she deadlocked at 95 for first place in Thursday's play. One shot behind Miss McCune's 93 was Gertrude Lucas, of Oil City.

BASEBALL COMEDY

By NICK ALTROCK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Whether you are good at arithmetic or not, the pennant winners are now in. But the races will go on a couple of more days till the St. Louis Browns mathematically clinch eighth place.

Nick Altrock

For the rest of the big league stretch, the other teams are experimenting on how to snatch the flag next year. And, if I was determined to win the 1934 American League pennant, here's the experimenting I'd do if I was on another club.

I'd hire a professional hypnotist. Let him do his stuff on the Washington players. Keep them thinking they are playing for the honor and glory of the cellar. Wake them up just as they are about to clinch the tail-end berth. After that, I'd think some other club besides our Washington might have a chance next year.

Waynesburg Bows To Bucknell, 46-7

LEWISBURG, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Flashing a powerful running attack and a deceptive passing offensive, Bucknell defeated Waynesburg last night 47 to 6.

Myers, Bison halfback, covered himself with glory by scoring three touchdowns. Waynesburg's aerial game was a constant threat and three times the visitors started marches, but only in the second period could they score. Donelly and Currie uncorked a passing attack that completed four forwards and a lateral pass that netted a gain of 70 yards. The lineup:

STOCK MARKET PRICES SWING UPWARD

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Stocks swung higher today for advances of fractions to more than a point, but trading turned quiet after initial briskness. Alcohols and rails recorded the best gains.

American Commercial Alcohol and United States Industrial Alcohol rose 2 points each. Other shares up around a point or more included American Can, American Smelting, American Telephone, Chrysler, New York Central, Case, Southern Pacific, Baltimore and Ohio and National Distillers. United States Steel was a fraction higher.

The administration's plans to lend cotton farmers 10 cents a pound on their holdings of this year's crop, on condition that they accept the government's crop reduction program, was interpreted in Wall Street not only as an indication that the President intended to further raise commodity prices but that drastic currency inflation thus far was not being considered seriously.

This second notable step in the way of increasing farm prices, some bankers felt, might go a long way toward stilling the recent congressional clamor for currency expansion. The new cotton proposal, it was thought, probably would invole potential loans to farmers of some $400,000,000 should all of those still in possession of their cotton decide to cooperate.

The announced advance in quotations for steel bars, plates and shapes for delivery in the fourth quarter, while not unexpected in the financial district, was expected to be of interest to railways managements and their possible orders for new equipment. The railroads previously have been timid about entering commitments for new rolling stock and rails because of the price situation.

The British pound sterling was heavy, falling 1¼ cents to a cable rate of $4.78. French francs also eased .03 of a cent at 6.05 cents, and Dutch guilders, Belgian belgas and Swiss francs were moderately lower.

Newly Formed Bank Opens at Johnstown

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Doors of the newly-organized United States National Bank, which prior to restricted operation had been one of the two largest banking institutions in the Johnstown region, todaywere to swing open for business.

In a letter from J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency at Washington, to President John W. Walters of the new bank, resumption of the United States National banking officials. The letter accompanied license for reopening of the institution on an unrestricted basis.

Commission Eases Securities Ruling

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Federal Trade Commission has adopted a new ruling to its securities regulations which would permit an extension of 20 days to a registrant to make and file necessary amendments to his registration without threat of stop-order proceedings. The procedure is designed to prevent an adverse record against a registrant whom it believes is ready to conform to the act.

N. Y. Department Store Sales Rise

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Retail sales this week in New York department stores have again shown an encouraging up-trend, with business running from 10 to 15 per cent ahead of the corresponding week a year ago. This follows an unusually severe drop in business in the preceding week, due to rainy weather.

So far, stores have had few adverse effects from the NRA.

Stores Replacing Homeware Stocks

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Replacement of stocks sold in recent homeware promotions is now being bought by a number of chain-store buyers in the wholesale markets. Interest centers in kitchen crockery to retail from 10 to 25 cents, metal pans and cooking utensils to sell from 25 to 75 cents and kitchen cutlery in the 10 to 20 cents range.

Youngstown Mill Schedules Raised

YOUNGSTOWN, Sept. 23.—Preliminary mill schedules in the Youngstown district for the coming week show that steel output probably will pass the 50 per cent mark to the highest level in more than a month. Buyers are taking advantage of third-quarter prices to build up supplies.

Seasonal Hardware Supplies in Demand

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—A sharp increase in consumer demand has resulted in greater activity in the wholesale hardware market. Retailers report brisk demand for furnace accessories, weather stripping, paint, electric and oil heaters and kits for household repairs.

MODIFIED NRA POLICY BRINGS RESPONSE

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—Business men seem to respond better to the modified policy of the National Recovery Administration.

Mr. Rukeyser

One outstanding financier, a director of numerous corporations, whose antennae are widely extended throughout the country, told me:

"It seems to me that there has been an improvement in NRA publicity in the last few weeks. This has toned down, and no longer is such exaggerated emphasis being placed on the wrong things. The period of intense excitement seems to be approaching an end, and manufacturers who have had to spend their days in recent weeks in reconciling themselves to the handicaps of the system will have a chance to consider its advantages.

"Much progress has been made since March 4, and irrespective of one's apprehensions about certain features of the NRA, it becomes imperative for all to make every effort to have the experiment succeed."

MONETARY POLICY

Queried concerning monetary policy, my informant added:

"At the moment, all emphasis seems to be placed upon NRA and the disposition is to listen to the so-called 'sound money group' among the President's advisers. Any talk of inflation, either in the near or remote future, is soft pedaled, and there is apparently a disposition to see whether we cannot work our way out of this situation on the basis of farm relief and the National Recovery Administration without maneuvers in the currency field.

"In the credit field, an expansion of the open market purchases by the Federal Reserve is supposed, for the time being, to take the place of any other financial measures. My own belief is that this will not prove sufficient and that the new policy is based upon a temporary abandonment of the fundamentally sound objectives in the domain of prices, which were so essentially a part of the original administration program.

TO LEARN LESSON

"It is too bad that we will all have to again learn a lesson already abundantly made clear by past experience, but this seems to be the case. Sooner or later, the doctrinaire 'sound money group' is going to be, it would seem to me, as much discredited as the 'sound deflationist group' that so 'soundly' conducted the Clearing House banks and the Federal Reserve System to the brink of disaster in the Hoover administration.

"The new gold ruling is unsatisfactory. Instead of providing the basis on which we can retain our own new gold production, and under certain circumstances draw new gold production from other parts of the world, it makes it necessary for us to lose our new gold, which, of course, has the additional unfavorable effect of creating a demand for dollars abroad tending to strengthen the dollar, when sound policy would still be to keep it weak."

HOPEFUL ASPECT

The most hopeful aspect of the business situation lies in the field of retail buying.

September should be a good automobile month, but when the industry faces the period of seasonal letdown. Unless there is substantial railroad buying in October there may also be some seasonal tapering off in steel.

Woolens have been holding up well, but there have been some reports of excessive competition and price-cutting in cottons.

Big Food Concerns Will Support Code

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—A pledge from representatives of the nation's major food industries to support a master code aimed to achieve pre-war "parity" prices for farm products was announced today by George N. Peek, chief administrator of the farm act.

Peek said the pledge "is the most significant event since the Agricultural Adjustment Administration was established" and indicated arrangements for assuring higher prices to farmers through agreement with the industries could be completed soon after November 1.

DROP IN STEEL PRODUCTION NEAR END

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel ingots this week has been at fully 36 per cent of capacity, the same as last week, but the fact furnishes no assurance that the decrease is permanently interrupted, as some special influences are temporarily supporting production, including rolling of a rail order in the Chicago district and specifying against strip contracts expiring September 30 as prices have been advanced since the contracts were made.

The decline was from a high rate of 60 per cent, in the two weeks ended July 22, and thus amounted to two-fifths. The trade thinks it quite possible that this decline is sufficient to equalize with conditions and considers it quite improbable that if there is further decline it will amount to more than a very few points. Apparently no one thinks a rate as low as 30 per cent possible.

Four influences are in prospect to cause an upturn in steel activity. First, seasonal increase in requirements, fully expected but not yet visible. Second, settlement of various price details in connection with the code, uncertainty having been a restraining influence. Third, further improvement in business generally. Fourth, buying aided by the government, including railroad buying and carrying out of the federal construction program.

PRICES, COSTS RISE

On Wednesday the principal producers filed new prices on bars, shapes and plates, to become effective, by the 10-day provision of the code, next Saturday, bars being advanced $3 a ton to 1.75c, Pittsburgh, and plates and shapes $2 a ton to 1.70c. Meanwhile, mills can, if they desire, sell for any delivery to December 31 at present prices, but it does not seem probable that much business will be done as the form of contract to be used has not been determined, and the code forbids any canceling except for "a fair consideration," which needs to be defined.

Recent price advances on finished steel products are predicated upon large increases in production cost. Monthly compilations of costs have been showing much greater increases than were forecast. There are increases from wage advances, shortening of working time, higher costs of supplies and higher costs of producing coal and coke, while this last item is marked for further increase by the coal code just adopted. There was a time when the steel trade felt it needed only volume to get into the black, but now it finds it needs both volume and prices.

Steel marketing conditions are still more or less confused as many details have to be promulgated and absorbed by sellers, but a point has now been passed whereby the new problems arising are fewer than the problems being settled, and the prospect is that within a short time everything will have been ironed out, whereby transaction of business will proceed more smoothly than ever.

R. R. ORDERS NEARER

A few automobile makers have been taking in a little more steel than currently needed, to take advantage of old contracts, but parts makers have ordered no extra steel. Requirements of the industry are now decreasing sharply, the active season ending about three months later than normal.

Usually seasonal increase in steel demand is expected to develop before the middle of September, but this time, on account of the June and July bulge, it was expected to come later though not later than the middle of October at the outside. In no direction is any strictly seasonal increase seen thus far.

Possibilities of moderately heavy buying by the railroads in the near future are increasing, with the assistance of the government. The federal building program affords no promise of steel demand reaching the mills in that connection before the turn of the year.

While the Connellsville region and ajacent fields producing by-product coking coal are idle the by-product plants have stocks of coal and can draw from other fields, so that there is no uneasiness.

Heavy melting steel scrap has declined 25 cents, being now quotable at $12.25 to $12.75, representing a total decline of $1.25.

'BUTTONS' BACK ON GIFT JOB MONDAY

"Buttons" will take a day off tomorrow. Monday, however, he will start on his daily mission of giving away cash to Pittsburghers.

"Buttons" is the Sun-Telegraph page boy and he drops into homes like a ray of sunshine because he leaves a cash award wherever he punches a doorbell. It's a mighty gratifying sign when you see this smartly uniformed page boy in your neighborhood. It means that you or one of your neighbors is going to get a present of cash.

Every day the Sun - Telegraph "pages" 11 names of readers of this newspaper. The names appear on the Want Ad pages. The list is then given to "Buttons" and he goes out and calls on each person named. To one of these 11 he gives $5—to the other 10 he presents $1 each. There is no obligation—the fortunate man "paged" gets the money just like finding it.

Monday may be the day your name is "paged." You won't know about it in advance unless you watch the Sun-Telegraph. And if it isn't there Monday, probably it may appear Tuesday or Wednesday. Just watch the Sun-Telegraph and get a thrill.

By the way, "Buttons" is distributing this $15 daily to boost the "Spend a Dollar . . . Make a Job . . . Buy in September and Save" campaign. If "Buttons" calls on you, you can be among the boosters.

Fair's Night Scene Enthuses Hoover

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—"I enjoyed it immensely."

Thus did Herbert Hoover express his enthusiasm today after gratifying a wish to see the World's Fair sights by night. The former President and Mrs. Hoover planned to return tonight for another tour. The Hoover party was entertained at dinner in the Administration Building last night.

Claire's Broker Sought on Bad Check Charge

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—A warrant for the arrest of Alfred C. Read, Jr., former Oakland broker, who figured in the recent alienation suit of his divorced wife, Marian, against Claire Windsor, actress, on a charge of issuing a worthless check, was sworn out in police court here today.

R. J. Beban, vice president of the Varney Air Lines, alleged Reed gave a bad check last March for $36.11 for passage between here and Los Angeles. Officers wre informed Read was living "at a large Los Angeles hotel."

NEW FAST ROAD PROPOSED

Presented by Coleman Murphy, an engineer, before a meeting of the National Highway Traffic Study Association of West of Pittsburgh in Crafton, the plans involves a new road from the Thornburg Bridge through Crafton and thence by a tunnel 3,300 feet long to Obey avenue and Mansfield road and thence over a new highway parlelling the trolley line to McGann's corners to meet Saw Mill Run boulevard. From there the new road would run parallel to Main street, on the south, to the new North Side Bridge.

Among those in attendance at the meeting were Henry Close, Pennsylvania highway engineer; Senator Frank J. Harris, County Commissioner W. D. Mansfield, E. L. Schmidt, county engineer, and Charles M. Reppert, city engineer.

GOTHAM LOAN UNSOLVED

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The city's financial dilemma remained unsolved today—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, city officials and bankers having failed again to reach an agreement on a $72,000,000 loan to the city.

For four hours yesterday Gov. Lehman, Mayor John P. O'Brien and bankers debated the city's finances. Lehman, acting as financial arbiter, said the conferences would be resumed Monday.

Mayor O'Brien spiked a report that the city would abandon the program for raising of $40,000,000 in new taxes—a program which has caused members of the New York Stock Exchange to lay plans for opening of a new exchange in New Jersey.

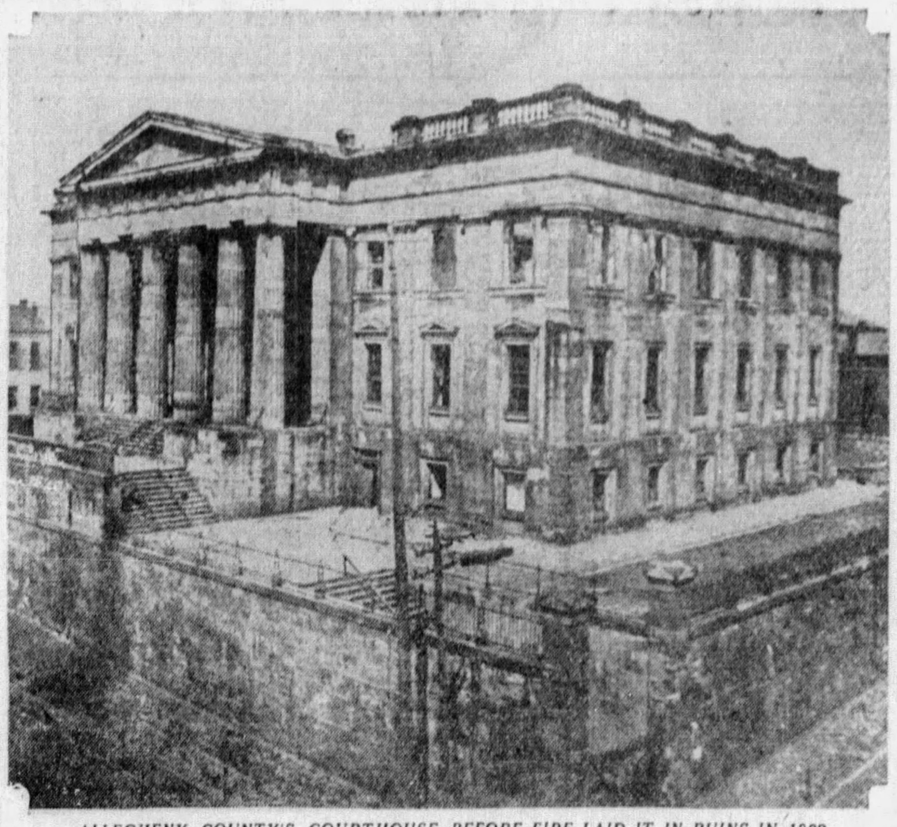
REMEMBER WHEN This Was the Courthouse?



ALLEGHENY COUNTY'S COURTHOUSE BEFORE FIRE LAID IT IN RUINS IN 1882

The courthouse, on the same location as it is today, before flames left it in ruins more than 50 years ago. This picture, submitted anonymously to the Sun-Telegraph's Remember When Editor, follows one published last week to show the courthouse wreckage.

Have You Any 'Remember When' Pictures?

"Remember When" pictures—the older the better—may be submitted by mail to the REMEMBER WHEN EDITOR, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., with full explanations for consideration as suitable for publication on this page. Pictures of groups of more than six people are unacceptable. WARNING: Write name and complete address on the back of each picture to assure safe return.

By ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

to do: I'm going to contract for the output of the best distilleries in England and Scotland; I'm going to get an option on about all the wine in Franc . "Americans have learned to like Scotch in the last dozen years. Rye and Bourbon have been too hard to get, and the average American has forgotten what American whisky tastes like. He wants his Scotch and he's going to continue wanting it. Maybe it'll cost him a little more, but price never comes between an American and his liquor.

"They like French wines, too. Do you suppose they're going to turn back to native wines? Not on your life. And I'm prepared to invest five millions in grabbing the supplies at their source. But a lot of legitimate folk have been thinking along these lines, and it will take a smart man to get those English and French to deal with a racketeer. And you're the smart man that can persuade them. Two-hundred-grand retainer, all your expenses and 15 per cent of the company I form. How does that sound?"

"I'm a lawyer," said Durant. "I'm not interested."

Recommends Voyage

"You're not the kind of a man to form a snap judgment," said Crelliman. "Sit down and we'll talk it over."

Durant shook his head. "I said I'm not interested."

"A sea voyage is swell for the health," said Crelliman. "The last time I saw Gertie she looked a little bit peaked. Eight days on a steamer—I like those slow boats; you get more sea air—would do wonders for that little girl. You'd be surprised how much longer you'd both live."

"The hurly-burly and excitement of Manhattan," said Durant. "The tension, the eternal rumble of the city, the pressure of other minds upon your own. It keys you up, doesn't it?"

"You wouldn't kid me, would you?" said Crelliman.

"Two hundred grand in the mitt ought to prove how serious I am," said Crelliman.

"It would prove you're serious about something, but not necessarily about buying up all the wine and whisky in Europe."

"Well, what else could it prove?"

"I'd be gone about a year, you say. Siddall would be chaired by then, wouldn't he?"

Crelliman's eyes were opaque. "Why, I should think that all the appeals would be out of the way by then," he replied blandly. "What about it?"

"Nothing; I was just thinking out loud," said Durant.

Threatens Durant

"Do some more thinking," advised Crelliman. "You just spoke of the high tension of this town. I want to tell you you're right. A man isn't safe in this burg. You can't tell when a taxi is going to bump into you. And the shooting going on all the time! How do you know when a stray bullet will knock you off? You might be out dancing somewhere with the little Waxted girl and the place might be stuck up, and you and she might get yours together. I honestly think that anyone who has a chance to spend a little time abroad is silly not to do it."

He rose, not too lithely, from his chair and walked toward Durant.

"How do you feel about it now?" he asked.

"I must be a great lawyer," said Durant. "Here's Siddall facing an airtight case, and yet you want me to leave town. What was the matter with Levitoff? Did the fact that I called on him have anything to do with his unhappy accident?"

"I wouldn't know what you're talking about," said Crelliman.

"I didn't suppose you would," said Durant. "And now, if you don't mind, I think I'll be going."

He bent over and retrieved the two suitcases from the floor, straightening up to meet the gaze of Crelliman. The ease of manner, the blandness of voice were gone from Crelliman now.

"Have it your own way, mug," said Crelliman. "I wanted to be nice. I wanted to give you a break. But you won't have it that way. When even your best girl tells you to get out, that she doesn't want you in the case, you still want to stick yourself in where you're not needed. I should think yesterday would have taught you something. But you smart guys can't learn anything. You have a little luck and you think it will stick forever. You ought to know what I can do. Miss Leonard doesn't think so much of you, does she? Well, no one will think much of you when I get through."

Durant set the suitcases on the floor. "A minute ago it was sudden death; now you're going to hurt my reputation. Your threats get weaker as you go along, Crelliman."

"My actions won't," said the other.

"Neither will mine," said Durant.

Strikes Crelliman

Without the slightest indication of his intention he smashed Crelliman on the mouth with his right hand. The gangster staggered back, caught at the chair in which he had been sitting and slumped to the floor. His hand went uncertainly to his mouth and wiped away blood. He looked up dazedly at Durant. Then bewilderment left his eyes and he struggled to his feet.

"What's the idea? he mumbled.

"I wanted to find out how yellow you were," smiled Durant. "You've got a gun in your pocket. Why don't you draw it? Don't feel up to it, eh? You've done a lot of talking, Crelliman, and it's time you listened to me. Siddall didn't kill Montagne, and you know it. And everyone's going to know it before I finish. I know you can deny this conversation, this bribe. And I can't prove it. I can't prove that you had Levitoff killed. But we both know you did and proof comes along when knowledge is certain. And I don't like people to bribe me, and still less do I like to be threatened."

Crelliman's hand moved toward his shoulder. Then it dropped to his side. "So I'm yellow, eh? Because I'm not sucker enough to pull a gun on you and get myself in a jam. Because I don't slap you down I'm afraid of you. Okay, Mr. Durant. We'll be seeing each other. I've tried to be nice, I've given you plenty warning, but you won't take it. Now you wander on your way and let's see how far you go."

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Lots of people do not get enough to eat or have enough clothes to wear or have a nice place to sleep. That's one of the reasons why we would like to have every Junior Patrol member always looking for ways to help others less fortunate than we are.

It begins to look as though someone is trying to make trouble for Junior, Spike and the other Junior Patrol boys in the comic strip. Of course they still have lots of time to play some dandy games—hare and hounds, for instance, when the fellow who is the hare leaves a trail of paper bits scattered along while he runs. Some fellows play this game with chalk and mark arrows on the streets showing which corner they turn. The chalk is better in city streets, but the paper is fine out in the woods and open country.

Don't forget fellows, that this is a fine time of year to stay out-of-doors—to go on hikes and to have weiner roasts. Fall weather always seems to make people want to walk. Soon the leaves will be turning gold and scarlet. They're pretty, but don't tear branches off trees to get them. Beautiful leaves are like beautiful flowers—they look best right where they grow.

We wonder how many of our Junior Patrol members cultivated a garden and flowers this summer? It's a good idea to do it, fellows, and we hope that next summer all of you children will have a flower bed or a garden. You can learn a lot from growing things—just watching one plant grow will teach you more about how the sun and soil and moisture do things than a big book will.

The books are valuable, too, because they tell what other men have learned before you. If you read books you can learn thousands of things that you would never have time or know enough about to find out for yourselves.

We hope that you all like school by this time and that you are all having a good time going to school. Honest, it's fun if you WANT to learn things!

Don't forget that we are organizing the Junior Patrol orchestra to play over the radio. SEND US YOUR NAME NOW IF YOU PLAY A MUSICAL INSTRUMENT.

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to help children less fortunate than I am,
I promise to do my best to make my parents proud of me.
I promise to watch carefully when crossing streets and to aid other children in keeping out of danger.

THE BATTLE OF CERRO GORDO, MEXICO (1847)

Border-clashes between Mexicans and Texans, whose state had been admitted into the union in 1845, resulted in such irritation of the people that the United States declared war on Mexico (1846). On his victorious march toward the City of Mexico, which he captured, Gen. Winfield Scott, one of the American commanders, fought the battle of Cerro Gordo. The Mexican War was terminated with the treaty of Guadaloupe-Hidalgo (1848), enlarging the United States territory with New Mexico and California. (United States History.)

THE FOREST, SOURCE OF LUMBER

The forest is as beautiful as it is useful. It supplies fuel and lumber, without which the world's material progress would be impossible.

The cross-grain cut shows the annual rings indicating the age; it shows also the wall thickness of the tubes from which the tree is built, conclusive for the strength of the wood.

STILL FINISHES YEAST'S WORK

Yeast and similar micro-organisms change sugars into ethanol (C_2H_5OH) and carbon dioxide (CO_2) by a process called fermentation. F. i. dextrose ($C_6H_{12}O_6$) when fermented yields $2C_2H_5OH$ and $2CO_2$.

MARLBOROUGH AMONG HIS SOLDIERS

After the death of Charles II, a Hapsburger king of Spain, in 1701, the dynasties of France and Austria claimed the Spanish throne; thus the war of "Spanish Succession" began. Spain and France fought Austria allied with England, Holland and some German states. The English Duke of Marlborough commanded the allied forces and won the first important victory at Blenheim (1704), which led to the Treaty of Utrecht (1713). The Bourbons became rulers of Spain, which, however, lost large dominions to Austria and England. (World's History.)

PILE-SUPPORTED FOUNDATIONS

Piles are used to support the foundation in case the bearing-value of the ground is less than the calculated pressure at the footing. Piles are concrete columns, seldom wood. Their dimensions depend upon local conditions. They are either precast of concrete reinforced with steel bars and driven in afterwards (a); or they are cast in place and the rammed-in steel shell is withdrawn (b); they may be cast also in a previously-sunken steel shell which stays (c). On top of the piling the footing is built. (Huntington: Building Construction.

A Long Time on the Monon

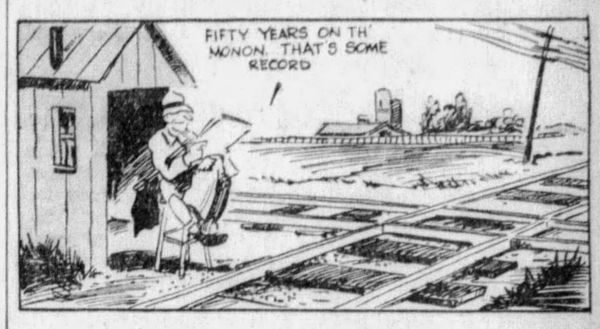
Now, The Bug ain't never been heroic enough to get any decorations or be nipped on the blushing cheek by a French general. So he knew it didn't belong to him.

When we asked what it was she said, "It's grandpop's. He got it for 25 years on the Monon."

Under adroit questioning we discovered the Monon was a railroad linking Chicago with Indianapolis. Grandpop was a crossing-tender and got the medal after 25 years of faithful flagging and waving. There was a dinner, the road superintendent made a speech and grandpop stood up and said, "Thanks," and sat down again.

We thought that was a career. Especially when we learned that nobody had ever been hurt at grandpop's crossing which was all grade and no bridge.

The wife said, "That's nothing. You should have seen the medal grandpop got for 50 years on the Monon."



We imagined the 50-year medal would be gold or something. But that was silver too. And no bigger than the first. There was another banquet which we begin to suspect was held in grandpop's shack at the crossing. The third or fourth successor to the original superintendent made a speech and grandpop corroborated his earlier "thanks."

That doesn't seem to be much reward for 50 years on the Monon. We have seen decorations given for less and citations earned much easier. And very few of the blushing recipients can claim that nobody has ever been hurt on their crossings.

Grandpop never missed a day in 50 years, walked three miles to his job, rain or shine, worked from dawn to dark, bought a $1,200 home and got two silver medals.

It's a long time on the Monon and a long time anywhere. He must have been a patient, hard-working man. He earned his complimentary ticket through the pearly gates and should be rated among the angels as a guest artist.

But we bet grandpop turned around and galloped the other way if they met him at the gates with a third silver medal. Fifty years on the Monon is enough.

For Greater Pittsburgh

Speedy Action Is Needed If the Metropolitan District Amendment Is to Pass.

The people of Pennsylvania will vote on November 7 on a constitutional amendment of the greatest importance to Pittsburgh—that authorizing the submission of a metropolitan district charter to the citizens of Allegheny County. And yet little, apparently, is being done to call the voters' attention to the significance of the measure.

There is cause for concern in the situation. The amendment paves the way for a Greater Pittsburgh which will take in all of Allegheny County. It will permit great savings in the costs of local government. It will make for greater efficiency of administration. It will establish Pittsburgh as the fourth or fifth city of the nation in point of population. And yet our civic bodies are apathetic.

When this question was before the voters before we had a Metropolitan District Commission headed by Joseph Torrence Miller to promote the project and explain what was involved. The Legislature did not see fit to continue the commission, and as no other body has seen fit to step into the breach the work of promotion has been dropped.

Thanks to the energy of Mr. Miller's organization, the project was approved by the voters of the state when presented to them in a somewhat different form several years ago, and subsequently came very close to receiving the vote required for its adoption by the municipalities of Allegheny County. But it is doubtful if the present amendment can be passed without a campaign of education.

It is necessary not only to convince the people of the boroughs and townships of the county that they will be better off under the Metropolitan District plan, but also to convince the voters in every other county that the amendment will be beneficial. Even though it affects Allegheny County alone, it is certain that thousands of citizens elsewhere will vote against it.

But for some support that was obtained in Philadelphia as a result of speeches made there by Mr. Miller and a co-worker, the previous amendment would have failed of passage. Since it seems no educational efforts are planned this year, the outlook is far from cheerful. There is yet time, but action must be speedy. The Chamber of Commerce and kindred bodies should get busy.

If the passage of the constitutional amendment can be secured, the remainder of the struggle will not be so difficult as it was in 1929. At that time the charter, to become effective, required not only a majority vote in the county, but a two-thirds majority in a majority of the municipalities. Under the new plan the two-thirds majority is not required. A majority in the county and a bare majority in a majority of the municipalities will put the charter into effect.

Discussion of the 11 other constitutional amend- ments that come up in November is also in order. Some of them involve immense expenditures of money. It is proposed, for example, to issue $50,000,000 of bonds to provide for a bonus to the state's war veterans, and $25,000,000 of bonds for unemployment relief and to meet other obligations. These are not matters for snap judgment.

Then there is the proposed $10,000,000 bond issue for the purchase of toll bridges, which are to be made free after they have paid for themselves. Another amendment would increase the bond issuing limit of the counties from 7 to 10 per cent of the assessed value of the real estate. Still another proposal authorizes state pensions to blind persons.

To judge by the fate of other proposals in recent years for heavy expenditures of money by the state, all of these measures face stiff opposition. And there is danger that some voters, "just on general principles," not only will vote against the bond issues, but against all the other amendments. That is why we need a campaign of education to save the Metropolitan District plan.

Of widespread interest is the amendment which would abolish the payment of a state or county tax as a requirement for eligibility to vote. Important, too, is the measure permitting the General Assembly to authorize cities and boroughs to assess costs of highway improvements upon abutting property where no prior assessment has been made for a similar improvement.

Another amendment empowers the Legislature to define the nature and kind of investments for trust funds that may be made by fiduciaries. Another allows cities in laying out highways to provide for future widening by purchasing more land than is needed for actual construction. If there are objections to these proposals, the legislative and municipal authorities should lay them before the public for consideration.

Proposal No. 7 on the ballot provides that com- mon carriers may not charge more for short hauls of passengers and freight than for long hauls over the same lines. We have now briefly described the purport of 11 of the 12 amendments. The twelfth applies to Philadelphia only; it empowers that city, in providing additional transit facilities, to levy assessments against the property benefited.

These are all things to think about and discuss during the next six weeks. They should be discussed at public meetings by persons competent to lay the facts and the arguments pro and con before the voters. The questions cannot be answered intelligently if the people give no thought to them before entering the polling places on November 7.

Must a woman be beautiful to be loved? This always interesting question is the subject of an important article in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the big magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The charms of Cleopatra, Ninon de l'Enclos, the Empress Josephine and other famous beauties are discussed. The illustrations are notable.

The Roundup

(Copyright, 1933.)

At least one of these States, the Prohibitionists hoped, would vote for retention of the Eighteenth Amendment and save the faces of the irreconcilables.

GLOUCESTER DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Sept. 23.—Entering Gloucester, a fisherman in heroic bronze, flung up in a shore square, quite appropriately meets the eye. Gloucester is all fishing, chiefly for haddock and scrod. And from here comes much of the cod liver oil poured down the gullets of the thankless young.

Gloucester is of antique mould, an island, in this necklace of semi-circles flung askelter along the Atlantic coast. The water front, packed tight with fishing shacks, savors adventure. The hardy, wind-tanned population was begat by generations of fisher folk.

The men have the squint of the sea and the honesty of their gaze is warming after Manhattan's shifty eye. With rolling gaits, slickers and water shedding hats many suggest the old prints. Pipe smoking is general and on account of the breeze the pipes are lidded.

These, then, are "They That Go Down to Sea!" The women, too, are sturdy, ample bosomed and clear eyed. They like to sit out front, unconsciously straining toward the sea. For sometimes their men do not come back. In almost every family tragedy leaves its scar.

* * *

For the accomplished idler there are few havens excelling the charm of the "Glo'ster wharves." Artists from all over have stood at their easels here and it has been the background for canvases in important galleries here and abroad. Every few hours a heavily laden schooner sloshes in from the "banks." Other sails flutter in the sun that dries them. Miles of nets are being strung and re-tarred. Busy crews are cutting bait. Girls waving good-bye.

* * *

But Gloucester's most famous citizen at the moment is not a fisherman. He is young John Hays Hammond, Jr., engineering wizard, who resides in a castle along the Cape Ann trail, a short drive away. His laboratory is there and a forbidding wall encloses the vast acreage. Young Hammond is seldom seen, but when he appears is cordial and a favorite.

* * *

A relic of the community is Dogtown, a district opposite the old town green. It is Gloucester's abandoned village. Only ancient scarps and cellar holes remain of a hell-rake hamlet, where witch craft threaded its horror. Finally Dogtown men went to the wars and left dogs to guard their women—hence the name—and never returned. On the nearby coast is a fierce rock formation called "The Whale's Jaw."

* * *

Gloucester in boom opulence had about 25,000 inhabitants. This has dwindled to around 20,000. The majority of men go out to the fishing banks—sometimes 250 miles out—at 7 in the morning and seldom return until their boats are filled. Prices for the catches fluctuate daily.

* * *

The most famous spot hereabouts, of course, is Norman's Woe, the deadly reef setting for Longfellow's "The Wreck of the Hesperus." We motored out along the appropriately named Hesperus avenue as the sun blared into the dull red evening glow that is the fisherman's delight. It seemed incredible that this rock, not more than 200 feet long, juting out of the sea, doomed so many mariners. All about were far more pretentious projections.

* * *

On a bench hewn of rough logs and cupped in a rocky outcrop at Magnolia we had a poetical view of Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Only my wife could recall the lines. As she recited them, and I'll wager they are correct, they ran:

Such is the wreck of the Hesperus
God save us all from a death like this
On the reef of Norman's Woe!

* * *

Driving on around the cape we got the sillies. Everything went suddenly annisquam—the town of Annisquam, Annisquam River and Annisquam Willows. We tried to figure out the meaning. Harry Silvey suggested it sounded like suddenly sitting down on a ripe pawpaw. And I discovered you could substitute annisquam for any active verb and in no time at all become a perfect bore.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Strange how you've always believed in yourself, isn't it? No matter how discouraged you've been, or how ashamed, even in those darkest times when you've longed to end it all, still something deep within you has gone on believing in yourself, believing in your own secret goodness and greatness.

Of course you can't prove this. Indeed, most of the evidence is against you. By the usual tests you're pretty much of a failure. And yet you know, you've always known, that you're better than you seem. And often, when other people are laughing at you or blaming you, you long to cry aloud the truth about yourself. You wish you could say:

"You're wrong! You're all wrong. I know I've made a mess of things but I'm really not like that inside. Inside, I'm different. I'm wise, even though I may seem a fool. I'm brave, though I've acted like a coward. I love decency and honesty, though my record is so smeared.

"But you've no right to judge me by my record. Our records aren't our real selves. You've never seen my real self. I've never been able to show it. But I know it's in me, somewhere. And I've always known it—though I could never prove it.

"So, no matter what you think about me or do to me, I believe in myself. And I'll always believe in myself. You can take everything else away from me, but you can't take that!"

Often you've wanted to say that, haven't you, my dear? And it was the truth. Nothing in all your life is as surely true as that secret conviction of your own fineness. Everything else about you is part of a muddled dream. Everything else is a fumbling and groping—blind, awkward gestures which always go awry.

But beneath the dream's confusion, something holds steady and strong and true. You can't name it. You can't prove it. But there it is. And when everything else fails you, you cling to that core of surety—that confidence in your secret self.

Why are you—why are we all—like that? Why should we believe in ourselves in the face of all the damning evidence of our own worthlessness; in spite of our own discouragement and despair?

Once, long ago, a wise old man named Epictetus answered those questions. No man knew more about heartache and humiliation than Epictetus, for he was a crippled slave without home or possessions, family or education. Yet in spite of pain and poverty, or perhaps because of them, he became one of the greatest philosophers.

How could a man endure life; endure himself? From the time he was a boy Epictetus heard that question—saw it flaring in the eyes of desperate men. What could be given to such men which would comfort and strengthen them? Not riches, not pleasure, or even power. Experience proved all too plainly that there was no lasting help in these things.

But there was one thing which a man could have that would last—which would withstand any test if he had the courage to cling to it—and that was FAITH IN HIMSELF.

So Epictetus told men to believe in themselves, not because they were men, but because they were gods! Down through the filthy rags of their slavery he reached—past the brands that other men had put on them — past the shackles they had put upon themselves—into the secret places of their hidden hearts. And there, in that secret place, he found that mysterious thing in which every man believed, to which every man could cling—HIS BETTER SELF.

"Why is life worth while?" Epictetus to those desperate men. "Because you, yourself, are worth while. Because, no matter what you may seem outwardly, there is greatness and goodness within you. You are a distinct portion of the essence of God, and you contain a certain part of Him in yourself. You carry a god about with you.

"Do you suppose I mean some god of gold or silver? No, it is within yourself you carry this god. You are the workmanship of God. He hath not only formed, but intrusted and given the guardianship of you to yourself. He hath delivered yourself to your care and says, 'I had no one fitter to be trusted than you: preserve this person for me, such as he is by nature: modest, faithful, sublime, unterrified, dispassionate, tranquil.' Will you not preserve him?"

You carry a god. You are a god! No matter how obscure you are, how wasted or wrong, you are part of the glory and beauty and power of life. Never forget that, never cease to be proud of that.

Believe in yourself — bank on yourself—hold hard to that truth about yourself — AND THE TRUTH WILL SET YOU FREE!

Who has learned to seek truth, knowing
Life is not what it appears.

Better fitted to pass judgment,
Yet but seldom dooming those

Far more able to speak sagely,
Time's rich harvest his to teach,
But in silence poised and waiting,
Careful ever of his speech.

The Human Side of the News

The World's Richest Men—Andrew W. Mellon Listed—Some Obscure Nabobs—Eu Yang Sang, Chinese Croesus

By EDWIN C. HILL

WHO are the richest men in the world today? A very interesting and probably quite authentic list and reckoning is supplied by Richard Lewinsohn, a writer in Vu of Paris. Scanning four continents (Africa apparently lacks a real Croesus since the passing of Cecil Rhodes) Mr. Lewinsohn discovers 17 men whose lumped fortunes could satisfy the national debts of every civilized country in the world. Curiously enough, there are only five Americans in the list. These are Henry Ford, Edsel Ford, his son; John D. Rockefeller, Sr., and his son, John D. Jr., and Andrew W. Mellon.

The other 12 furnish an arresting survey. Richest of all is, in all likelihood, the Nizam of Hyderabad in India. His treasure of gold and jewels is known to be worth at least half a billion dollars. Close behind him, in the march of Midas, comes the great Mohammedan potentate and British sportsman, Prince Aga Khan, for whose soul salvation at least 200,000,000 brown-skinned human beings bow the knee every day of the year.

* * *

Fortunes Survive World Depression

IN that class, or upon its near fringe, are Simon Patino, the Tin King of Bolivia, the Duke of Westminster, Sir Basil Zaharoff, of Paris, and Monte Carlo, and the French financial magnate, Edouard de Rothschild. The list is completed by the names of ex-Kaiser, William of Hohenzollern; the Gaekwar of Baroda, a native state of India; Lord Iveagh, of England; G. de Wendel, of France; Louis-Louis Dreyfus, of France, and Fritz Thyssen, German industrialist.

Such vast and solid fortunes easily survived the shock of the world depression, and it is remarked by the Parisian commentator that the immense fortunes of the Indian nabobs were notably successful in resisting the inroads of hard times. That is true because the bulk of their possessions is invariably in enormous stores of gold bullion and gold coin, along with great hoards of silver, and in fabulously valuable collections of jewels — treasures handed down from antiquity and regarded always as a family possession rather than as a private individual fortune.

An interesting list, but probably quite incomplete. Mr. Lewisohn might well have included names scarcely known on this side of the world: Calouste Sarkis Gulbenkian, the oil magnate of Armenia, with one of the greatest fortunes of Europe and Asia; the Petscheks, coal kings of Czechoslovakia, said to control the largest fortune east of the Rhine; the princely Radziwills of Poland, and the enormously rich Esterhazys of Hungary, whose estates are equal in area to more than one American state.

A Chinese Croesus With Ten Palaces

ACCURATELY enough could the name of Eu Yang Sang have been written in this golden roster. For Mr. Eu Yang Sang, one of the most remarkable humans who walks the earth, is the Croesus of a country where millions perish every year for lack of anything to put in their stomachs, or freeze for lack of clothes to put on their patient backs. Mr. Eu Yang Sang, merchant, financier and rubber king, with financial tentacles extended all over the Far East, is believed to be "worth," as the saying is, $150,000,000, with at least $100,000,000 in hoarded gold and gems.

It is especially interesting that his name should come up, for at this very moment the Chinese Croesus is building his tenth palace, a magnificent structure on the sloping side of a bluff near Hong-Kong. His whole career is almost fantastically incredible, when one thinks of the general poverty of China, and of what it must take for a Chinese of humble origin to win to a place among the mighty of this world.

He was born near Canton and migrated to Singapore, where he laid the foundation of one of the world's great fortunes. His first money was made by dealing in drugs. Then he opened a money exchange in connection with each of his drug stores, a money exchange which is a kind of Chinese equivalent for the United States postal money order department. Then he bought up land and acquired tin mines and steamship lines and trading companies all through the Far East, and the gold came pouring into his strong boxes in a surging flood.

Son Marries An Englishwoman

HIS eldest son was educated at Cambridge and married a British woman, who has borne two children. The son's name is K. C. Eu, and, like the younger Rockefeller and the younger Ford in this country, had shoulders broad enough to shoulder his father's responsibilities and the greater part of his labor.

The elder Mr. Eu at 57 has retired from business on his doctors' orders, and gets his fun out of life building palaces and traveling about on one or another of a whole fleet of palatial steam yachts. In Hong Kong alone he has three homes and 50 servants and dozens of motor cars. Not only one of the richest men in the world, he owns more palaces than any Croesus or any crowned monarch.

He builds one costing a million or so, lives in it until the novelty fades, then moves back into an earlier creation, and when he tires of all his palaces, his wives, his concubines, his singing birds, his chest of emeralds and diamonds and rubies and pearls, he takes to one of his steam yachts—yachts that are always waiting, steam up, for the master's sudden commands.

An interesting gentleman, Mr. Eu Yang Sang, who would trade, so the Chinese newspapers say, all of his wealth for a brand new stomach and a brand new set of nerves.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Most official bodies, holding meetings at specified periods, waste much time in conducting the business they have to transact.

Half the time they consume should be enough to attend the work in hand.

If the business is carried on so directly and so continuously that there is no opportunity for mind wandering, much time is saved.

Those who have attended almost any kind of a public meeting realize that there is too much lost motion.

Too many subjects are touched upon instead of concentrating upon the important matters in the order of importance.

Usually in municipal bodies there are some persons who play to the galleries, drawing attention to themselves being their object, or putting over something favorable to a friend instead of working for the good of all whom they represent.

ISN'T IT SO?

Some fathers can't keep their daughters in a home, much less in clothes.

The longest distance between any two given points is that between the down payment and the one that makes you paid up.

There are just as many people going in for high life as there are going in for the higher life.

The age of discretion is when you realize that your troubles would have been few if you had kept your mouth shut.
